British Aviators Attack Italian Troops in Egypt

Counter Offensive Extends 60 Miles Inside Border

TEN FIRES SET ON ENEMY'S TRANSPORTS

Italy's Largest Airdrome Reported Destroyed by Fire

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 18 (AP)—British airmen heavily attacked Fascist desert troops at Sidi Marrani, sixty miles inside the Egyptian frontier today, military headquarters announced.

The British aerial counter-attack extended from that newly-won Italian base clear along the Mediterranean coast in Libya, it was said officially.

Singled out especially for bombardment were heavy artillery and other equipment which the Fascist had moved into Sido Barrani.

Italian planes lifted to meet the British but were ineffective in the series of raids, the British said.

At least ten fires were started in attacks on Italian transports at Buqbuq farther west, the second city the Italians occupied in the Egyptian offensive.

At Begazi, Libya, about 250 miles west of Sidi Barrani, the British said Italy's biggest military airdrome in North Africa went up in flames after British fliers swept down upon that point. The fires could be seen seventy miles away, it was said.

The Egyptian government, which still has not declared war on Italy, watched the developing desert war closely. Her premier declared himself "optimistic."

Gandhi Directing Anti-War Propaganda

BOMBAY, Sept. 18—Mohandas K. Gandhi, once more undisputed leader of India's main nationalist movement, has taken over the delicate task of directing non-violent anti-war propaganda, but under a pledge that it shall not embarrass Britain.

This wisp of a man, to be 71 years old Oct. 2, left for Wardha today after issuing instructions for complete discipline among his millions of followers pending an interview with the British Viceroy Lord Linlithgow.

Gandhi will seek permission to preach passive resistance to Britain and non-participation in the war.

Will Not Harm Britain

The All-India congress (Nationalist party) committee pledged that organization Monday not to embarrass Britain in her struggle with Germany, but at the same time to preach against war. The committee withdrew a conditional offer of cooperation with Britain and invited Gandhi, who had disagreed with the offer, to resume the leadership "in any action that should be taken."

Gandhi followed up this delegation of power with an interview in the Bombay mansion of Rameshwar Das Birla, multi-millionaire Indian industrialist and congress sympathizer.

Republicans Make Strong Showing in Wisconsin Primary

Poll More Votes Than Democrats and Progressives Together

By The Associated Press

Republicans polled more votes than the combined total of Progressive and Democratic candidates in Tuesday's gubernatorial primary in Wisconsin.

GOP Strong in Wisconsin

Incomplete Wisconsin returns showed that the two Republican candidates for governor already had polled a total well in excess of the party's complete official count in the 1938 primary and far ahead of the primary vote in 1936, the last presidential election year. The Republican nominee—Gov. Julius P. Heil—probably will be opposed in November by Orland S. Loomis, Progressive, and Francis E. McGovern, Democrat. The latter two had comfortable leads with most of the precincts counted.

The New York voting not only brought a New Deal test of strength in the American labor party, but it also saw an unsuccessful attempt of John J. O'Connor, anti-Roosevelt Democrat, to win nomination for congress on both republican and Democratic tickets. He was defeated in both contests.

Roosevelt Candidates Lead

In the labor party voting, enough returns had been tabulated to decide 94 of the 131 contests. These returns gave candidates favorable to President Roosevelt 53 congressional and legislative offices to 40 for those opposing a third term for the president. One nomination went to an independent.

Connecticut Republicans, meeting in convention Wednesday, selected Paul L. Cornell, a prepara-

Von Ribbentrop In Rome To Talk Over U. S. Moves

Sending of Warships to England Scheduled for Discussion

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Sept. 17—Germany sent Joachim von Ribbentrop to Italy today for the formulation of new axis "action—not words" in the midst of the Battle of Britain, and some inspired commentators indicated that the British-American trade of defense bases for destroyers will be weighed.

This subject has been treated with reserve in Germany and the German press, obviously at a hint from above, has consistently minimized its significance. Even today, authorized sources would not go beyond the statement that it was on the Rome "agenda," but their manner indicated the transaction is causing the axis powers concern.

Aside from this, however, Egypt and Spain were expected to be the primary subjects for discussion among Ribbentrop, whom some Germans now regard as a sort of second Bismarck, and Benito Mussolini and Count Ciano, his son-in-law and foreign minister.

Egypt Invaded

Egypt now has been invaded by Italian armies in what the German press has been calling a battle for the liberation of the Egyptians from the British. It seems logical that German troops might be used to help Italy in this push.

Spain this week sent Ramon Serrano Suner, key minister and brother-in-law of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, to Berlin, and now, informed sources say, the problem is where to fit Spain into the axis scheme of things. That Spain will want something in return for her co-operation is accepted, and most frequently mentioned is the great French island colony of Madagascar, in the Indian ocean.

This diplomatic interlude had no effect, it seemed, on Germany's pursuit of her British enemy. The high command listed as targets of day and night bombardment the great Thames-side docks of London, its water and gas works, railway stations and airdromes, and Nazi airmen were quoted by other sources as declaring that entire blocks in eastern London had been leveled by bombs.

Subway Wrecked

One stretch of subway, the aviators reported, is only a smoking, yawning crater.

Liverpool likewise was bombed intermittently for twenty-four hours, the high command said; Glasgow harbor in Scotland was attacked; a 5,000-ton steamer blasted north of Ireland and several large ships hit by shore batteries in the English channel.

Informed Germans say that the Wilhelmstrasse regards England's Winston Churchill as at bay. They described his House of Commons statement of yesterday as that of a man in a fighting mood—but with his back to the wall.

Famous Beauty Dies in Poverty

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP)—Jessie Reed, who once was hailed as the most glamorous girl in Florenz Ziegfeld's bevy of beauties, relinquished her role in life's drama today.

She died of bronchial pneumonia at the age of 43.

During the so-called "golden era"—the mad and merry epoch of Dempsey and Rickard, McGraw and Grange, speakeasies, silent films and model T's—she was known as one of the highest paid of Ziegfeld's show girls.

Miss Reed danced in the "Follies" for the last time in 1924. Since then she slipped gradually into relative obscurity.

Her name bobbed back into print in 1935. Reporters found her in a north side rooming house. She was contemplating an application to the relief commission for aid. Published stories brought her engagements in a loop theater and night clubs.

Last August she entered a hospital. Blood transfusions gave her a new lease on life.

Miss Reed was married five times. Her husbands were Leonard M. Reno, World War flyer and advertising man; "Dashing Dan" Caswell; William T. Young, Indianapolis advertising executive; Ollie Debrow; and Lew Reed, an actor.

A woman friend reported that she would make arrangements for the funeral.

New York Times Out For Wendell Willkie

Independent - Democratic Newspaper Supporting Republican

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP)—The New York Times tonight announced its support of Wendell L. Willkie for the presidency, the first time it has backed a Republican presidential candidate since 1908.

In a three-column editorial, the Times, which described itself as independent-democratic, said:

"We give our own support to Mr. Willkie primarily for these reasons; because we believe that he is better equipped than Mr. Roosevelt to provide this country with an adequate defense; because we believe he is a practical liberal who understands the need of increased production; because we believe that the fiscal policies of Mr. Roosevelt have failed disastrously; because we believe that at a time when the traditional safeguards of democracy are falling everywhere it is particularly important to honor and preserve the American tradition against vesting the enormous powers of the presidency in the hands of any man for three consecutive terms of office."

Latest Type Nazi Bomber Shot Down

LONDON, Sept. 19 (Thursday) (AP) — One of Germany's latest type bombers — a huge Junkers 88 — was shot down by anti-aircraft guns early today during the overnight raid on London and fell on the house occupied by Walter Grabner, head of the London office of Time and Life magazines.

The anti-aircraft guns also were reported to have brought down another raider—it's type not given—in Hyde park.

Willkie Praises Hiram Johnson In California

Says Senator 'Always Was and Still Is a Hero to Me'

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Sept. 18. (AP) — Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell Willkie charged in a speech tonight that President Roosevelt has more and more concentrated in himself power that should have been left to advisory bodies and commissions and has ignored the value of business enterprise.

"The truth is he has lost faith in us," Willkie said. "Whenever a problem arises, he does not think we can solve it. He steps in and tries to solve it himself.

ABOARD WILLKIE TRAIN, SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Sept. 18 (AP) —Wendell L. Willkie, starting a four-day campaign tour through California, declared today Hiram Johnson, recently renominated for the Senate, had been and still is "a hero to me."

Willkie said he had liked the Californian's "fearless investigation of facts," and that he had "passed the test of Liberalism."

Willkie's trainside audience applauded occasionally as the candidate spoke under a bright California sun.

There were cheers when he said that he was not drafted for the Republican presidential nomination but was "frankly seeking this job."

"I might say also," Willkie added, "that I doubt if anybody else was drafted."

Willkie said that he would be untrue to himself "if I did not pay my tribute to that great fighting, fearless liberal, Hiram Johnson."

Scores Adolf Hitler

"Bombs are dropping down on England," he continued, dropped by that heinous totalitarian, Adolf Hitler."

In order to preserve the Democratic system, Willkie asserted, two things are needed — the construction of a strong defense and the revitalization of domestic economy.

"I've come into California to preach that kind of doctrine," he continued.

Willkie said that if the present administration were returned to office it would raise the national debt "to between $75,000,000,000 and $100,000,000,000."

Sees Lower Living Standard

"If this federal debt keeps increasing," he continued, "it is going to lower the standard of living of every man, woman and child in America.

"I want to build the greatest defense program this country has ever seen and I want it built by men who know how to produce.

"Roosevelt never saw a factory gate until after he got into politics."

Missing Child Found by Police

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 18 (AP)—State motor police, aided by an airplane, today found two-year-old Ronald Rumbaugh wandering in a field two and a half miles from his Tyrone township home where he was last seen Sunday.

Although his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rumbaugh, and state police yesterday gave up hope of finding him alive he was described as being in "fairly good condition" upon arrival at the Connellsville state hospital.

Attendants he was hungry, scratched in many places by briars but little the worse for four days and three nights of exposure in the chilly, foggy weather.

State motor police, who had been working on a theory the child had been kidnaped, expressed amazement at his relatively good condition and said they would continue their investigation.

Ronald apparently had eaten nothing but had drunk water from streams which meander through the countryside. He disappeared Sunday while trying to follow his father and two older brothers to a baseball game.

The bomb later was exploded harmlessly in a swamp.

British Retaliate by Raiding Nazi Positions in France; Set Numerous Fires, London Asserts

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 19 (Thursday) (AP) —Thundering tons of high explosives showered on battered London and suburbs last night and early today from a steadily increasing force of Nazi attackers who left heavy damage and a mounting list of casualties in the empire capital.

More planes took part in the raid —the twelfth overnight attack since Germany began her "all out" assaults on London—than in the Tuesday-Wednesday overnight raid which caused heavy casualties.

But while the Germans dumped their bombs on London, British bombers were visiting destruction on German bases on the Nazi-held French and Belgian coasts in violent attacks against "invasion ports."

Bomb Fashionable Section

The German bombers caused great destruction in the slums of east London in the early phases of the raids. Now they have turned their attention to the fashionable sectors of the capital as well-subjecting them to heavy bombing.

In the latest punishing attack, coughing men and women stumbled from fashionable apartments after direct hits were scored by incendiary bombs in central London.

Big bombs were hurled at the metropolis from the north rim to the south, east and west.

The shopping area, long the home of many of the world's famous fashion stores, was hit again and again by high explosive projectiles.

The plate glass in the windows of one department store which was not touched heretofore was smashed by a bomb exploding in the street in front of the store.

Bring Down Junker Plane

London's anti-aircraft gun barrage brought down at least two of the raiders—one of them a Junker 88, Germany's latest type of bombing plane.

The raiders violently strafed the center of London, dropping fat, blazing oil bombs in an effort to set fires in the city to guide them to their targets.

Flame bombs showered over the central area of London.

A tremendous explosion jarred a building in central London, a row of houses in north London was demolished; and a heavy bomb fell near a shopping center, throwing debris high into the air.

Through a storm of steel thrown up by the anti-aircraft batteries, the attack was pressed home with increasing violence in the fifth hour of the raid. Explosive bombs fell steadily in the heart of the city.

Across the English channel, the British bombers beat furiously at the Nazi-held French and Belgian coasts in the heaviest of all their long series of assaults on German bases, and the red in London's skies was matched by the flames of bursting shells and explosives which leaped high in the air on the other side of the water.

This latest attack on London began last night at 7:54 p. m., after seven daylight attacks on this endlessly harassed city—a city which military attaches agreed already had withstood in recent weeks a greater bombardment from the skies

Financial Burdens Of Drafted Men Is Eased by Senate

Senate Gives President Authority To Help Dependents

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (AP)—Seeking to ease the financial burdens of men drafted for military training, the Senate wrote into the excess tax bill today broad authority for the president to establish allowances for dependents.

He also would be empowered to establish an insurance system for the men and make modifications in the present social security regulations for their benefit.

It acted while the war department, waiting for President Roosevelt to sign executive orders establishing the machinery, rules and regulations for conscription, reported that numerous states were announcing progress on preparations for their part in the draft.

Governors Naming Boards

Many governors, it was said, have been selecting men for the local draft boards and arranging for regular election officials to handle the gigantic task of registering 16,500,000 eligible young men on Oct. 16.

The provisions adopted by the Senate were purposely vague, so that Senate and House conferees may work out more explicit language later on. They were adopted as a substitute for an amendment by Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) designed to continue old age pension and unemployment credits for draftees and national guardsmen called into active service.

The outlay for dependents is expected to be comparatively small at the start inasmuch as the gen-

Only Three Year Enlistments In Army, War Department Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (AP)—Young men of eighteen through thirty-five who want to volunteer for a year's army training without waiting to be drafted will have to be patient for a month or so.

War department official said today that, regardless of the selective service act, no immediate change is planned in the policy of accepting only three-year enlistments for the regular army.

Recruiting officers are not authorized to take one-year volunteers, but the local selective service boards which will begin functioning after the draft registration on October sixteen can accept them.

The act provides that men of [illegible] through thirty-five may volunteer in the army and navy for one year's training and service prescribed in the act. It stipulates, however, that they cannot be accepted if they have been deferred by the local boards because of physical handicaps, dependents or essential handicaps, dependents or essential jobs.

Since only the local boards are empowered to make diferment classifications, a selective service official explained, only they can accept such volunteers. While men from eighteen to twenty-one will not be required to register for classification, those who wish may volunteer to do so, along with men from twenty-one through thirty-five.

Those who wish to enter the army for three years may still apply at recruiting officers.

Those who volunteer for a year or three years, as well as persons now in the army, navy, marine corps and national guard, will be credited towards filling the draft quotas of their home districts.

Missing Baltimore Cornerstone Sought for Historical Material

By JOHN F. CHANDLER

BALTIMORE, Sept. 17. — (AP) — Exactly one hundred and twenty-five years ago the governor, the mayor and all the other dignitaries who could afford a high hat gathered around with appropriate speeches laid the cornerstone of Baltimore's Washington monument.

The dignitaries probably didn't realize they were doing a pretty snappy job of cornerstone laying on that afternoon of July 4, 1815, because, today, no one knows in which corner the stone is located.

"Boy, they laid it — and how!" exclaimed Charles A. Ruley, veteran custodian of the historic shaft, one of the first erected to Washington's memory.

Laid by Masonic Lodge

Ruley, a bricklayer in younger years, reasoned because the 180-foot column fronts on South Charles street making George face toward Chesapeake bay from his lofty perch, the cornerstone would probably be in the Southeast corner.

"It's only a guess, mind you," the custodian added, "but that's where I'd have put it."

The Grand Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, with Maryland's Governor Levin Winder and Mayor Edward Johnson of Baltimore officiated at cornerstone ceremonies for the $175,000 column.

It took almost fifteen years, or until Nov. 28, 1829, to finish the job, and anything can happen on a

Fast-Striking Italian Army in Action against British in Egypt

By The Associated Press

ROME, Sept. 18—The fast-striking army of Marshal Dodolfo Graziani spread southward from its new Egyptian base at Sidi Barrani today in an effort to mop up strong armored forces which the British have planted in desert ravines to conduct a "guerrilla warfare on wheels."

While the Italian blackshirts and native soldiers, attended by water carriers, headed on toward the Suez canal, the Fascist press extolled the "valor" of dusky Libyan warriors who, it was said, performed a march of sixty miles through the stifling heat and dust of a desert storm to capture Sidi Barrani in a surprise attack.

Await Von Ribbentrop

This taste of victory whetted interest in the expected arrival tomorrow of German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, who some quarters believed would seek to coordinate Italy's blows at the British water "lifeline" with Germany's hammering at London.

Il Giornale D'Italia declared still neutral Egypt would have to accept a "new order" from Italy similar to the German domination over east and central western Europe.

With her forces already sixty miles inside Egyptian territory at Sidi Barrani, heat, lack of water and British resistance were the main concern of Italian strategists as they mapped the next advance toward Matruh, seventy-eight miles eastward on the Mediterranean.

Italians said about two and half gallons of water are allotted to each man daily for drinking bathing and the cooling of motor

BALTIMORE, Sept. 17. — (AP) — Exactly one hundred and twenty-five years ago the governor, the mayor and all the other dignitaries who could afford a high hat gathered around with appropriate speeches laid the cornerstone of Baltimore's Washington monument.

The dignitaries probably didn't realize they were doing a pretty snappy job of cornerstone laying on that afternoon of July 4, 1815, because, today, no one knows in which corner the stone is located.

"Boy, they laid it — and how!" exclaimed Charles A. Ruley, veteran custodian of the historic shaft, one of the first erected to Washington's memory.

Laid by Masonic Lodge

Ruley, a bricklayer in younger years, reasoned because the 180-foot column fronts on South Charles street making George face toward Chesapeake bay from his lofty perch, the cornerstone would probably be in the Southeast corner.

"It's only a guess, mind you," the custodian added, "but that's where I'd have put it."

The Grand Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, with Maryland's Governor Levin Winder and Mayor Edward Johnson of Baltimore officiated at cornerstone ceremonies for the $175,000 column.

It took almost fifteen years, or until Nov. 28, 1829, to finish the job, and anything can happen on a

Only Three Year Enlistments In Army, War Department Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (AP)—Young men of eighteen through thirty-five who want to volunteer for a year's army training without waiting to be drafted will have to be patient for a month or so.

War department official, said today that, regardless of the selective service act, no immediate change is planned in the policy of accepting only three-year enlistments for the regular army.

Recruiting officers are not authorized to take one-year volunteers, but the local selective service boards which will begin functioning after the draft registration on October sixteen can accept them.

The act provides that men of eighteen through thirty-five may volunteer in the army and navy for one year's training and service prescribed in the act. It stipulates, however, that they cannot be accepted if they have been deferred by the local boards because of physical handicaps, dependents or essential handicaps, dependents or essential jobs.

Since only the local boards are empowered to make different classifications, a selective service official explained, only they can accept such volunteers. While men from eighteen to twenty-one will not be required to register for classification, those who wish may volunteer to do so, along with men from twenty-one through thirty-five.

Those who wish to enter the army for three years may still apply at recruiting officers.

Those who volunteer for a year or three years, as well as persons now in the army, navy, marine corps and national guard, will be credited towards filling the draft quotas of their home districts.

Willkie Praises Hiram Johnson In California

Says Senator 'Always Was and Still Is a Hero to Me'

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Sept. 18. (AP) — Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell Willkie charged in a speech tonight that President Roosevelt has more and more concentrated in himself power that should have been left to advisory bodies and commissions and has ignored the value of business enterprise.

"The truth is he has lost faith in us," Willkie said. "Whenever a problem arises, he does not think we can solve it. He steps in and tries to solve it himself.

ABOARD WILLKIE TRAIN, SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Sept. 18 (AP) —Wendell L. Willkie, starting a four-day campaign tour through California, declared today Hiram Johnson, recently renominated for the Senate, had been and still is "a hero to me."

Willkie said he had liked the Californian's "fearless investigation of facts," and that he had "passed the test of Liberalism."

Willkie's trainside audience applauded occasionally as the candidate spoke under a bright California sun.

There were cheers when he said that he was not drafted for the Republican presidential nomination but was "frankly seeking this job."

"I might say also," Willkie added, "that I doubt if anybody else was drafted."

Willkie said that he would be untrue to himself "if I did not pay my tribute to that great fighting, fearless liberal, Hiram Johnson."

Scores Adolf Hitler

"Bombs are dropping down on England," he continued, dropped by that heinous totalitarian, Adolf Hitler."

In order to preserve the Democratic system, Willkie asserted, two things are needed — the construction of a strong defense and the revitalization of domestic economy.

"I've come into California to preach that kind of doctrine," he continued.

Willkie said that if the present administration were returned to office it would raise the national debt "to between $75,000,000,000 and $100,000,000,000."

Sees Lower Living Standard

"If this federal debt keeps increasing," he continued, "it is going to lower the standard of living of every man, woman and child in America.

"I want to build the greatest defense program this country has ever seen and I want it built by men who know how to produce.

"Roosevelt never saw a factory gate until after he got into politics."

Missing Child Found by Police

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 18 (AP)—State motor police, aided by an airplane, today found two-year-old Ronald Rumbaugh wandering in a field two and a half miles from his Tyrone township home where he was last seen Sunday.

Although his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rumbaugh, and state police yesterday gave up hope of finding him alive he was described as being in "fairly good condition" upon arrival at the Connellsville state hospital.

Attendants said he was hungry, scratched in many places by briars but little the worse for four days and three nights of exposure in the chilly, foggy weather.

State motor police, who had been working on a theory the child had been kidnaped, expressed amazement at his relatively good condition and said they would continue their investigation.

Ronald apparently had eaten nothing but had drunk water from streams which meander through the countryside. He disappeared Sunday while trying to follow his father and two older brothers to a baseball game.

Heavy Damage and Many Deaths in Capital on Twelfth Night Attack

SAVED ST. PAUL'S

Lieut. R. Davies

A member of the Royal Canadian Engineers, Lieut. R. Davies, 45, directed the "suicide squad" which worked four days and nights to extricate a one-ton German time-bomb buried in a street near St. Paul's Cathedral and threatening to demolish the famous structure. The bomb later was exploded harmlessly in a swamp.

British Retaliate by Raiding Nazi Positions in France; Set Numerous Fires, London Asserts

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 19 (Thursday) (AP) —Thundering tons of high explosives showered on battered London and suburbs last night and early today from a steadily increasing force of Nazi attackers who left heavy damage and a mounting list of casualties in the empire capital.

More planes took part in the raid —the twelfth overnight attack since Germany began her "all out" assaults on London—than in the Tuesday-Wednesday overnight raid which caused heavy casualties.

But while the Germans dumped their bombs on London, British bombers were visiting destruction on German bases on the Nazi-held French and Belgian coasts in violent attacks against "invasion ports."

Bomb Fashionable Section

The German bombers caused great destruction in the slums of east London in the early phases of the raids. Now they have turned their attention to the fashionable sectors of the capital as well-subjecting them to heavy bombing.

In the latest punishing attack, coughing men and women stumbled from fashionable apartments after direct hits were scored by incendiary bombs in central London.

Big bombs were hurled at the metropolis from the north rim to the south, east and west.

The shopping area, long the home of many of the world's famous fashion stores, was hit again and again by high explosive projectiles. The plate glass in the windows of one department store which was not touched heretofore was smashed by a bomb exploding in the street in front of the store.

Bring Down Junker Plane

London's anti-aircraft gun barrage brought down at least two of the raiders—one of them a Junker 88, Germany's latest type of bombing plane.

The raiders violently strafed the center of London, dropping fat, blazing oil bombs in an effort to set fires in the city to guide them to their targets.

Flame bombs showered over the central area of London.

A tremendous explosion jarred a building in central London; a row of houses in north London was demolished; and a heavy bomb fell near a shopping center, throwing debris high into the air.

Through a storm of steel thrown up by the anti-aircraft batteries, the attack was pressed home with increasing violence in the fifth hour of the raid. Explosive bombs fell steadily in the heart of the city.

Across the English channel, the British bombers beat furiously at the Nazi-held French and Belgian coasts in the heaviest of all their long series of assaults on German bases, and the red in London's skies was matched by the flames of bursting shells and explosives which leaped high in the air on the other side of the water.

This latest attack on London began last night at 7:54 p. m., after seven daylight attacks on this endlessly harassed city—a city which military attaches agreed already had withstood in recent weeks a greater bombardment from the skies

Senate Gives President Authority To Help Dependents

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. (AP)—Seeking to ease the financial burdens of men drafted for military training, the Senate wrote into the excess tax bill today broad authority for the president to establish allowances for dependents.

He also would be empowered to establish an insurance system for the men and make modifications in the present social security regulations for their benefit.

It acted while the war department, waiting for President Roosevelt to sign executive orders establishing the machinery, rules and regulations for conscription, reported that numerous states were announcing progress on preparations for their part in the draft.

Governors Naming Boards

Many governors, it was said, have been selecting men for the local draft boards and arranging for regular election officials to handle the gigantic task of registering 16,500,000 eligible young men on Oct. 16.

The provisions adopted by the Senate were purposely vague, so that Senate and House conferees may work out more explicit language later on. They were adopted as a substitute for an amendment by Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) designed to continue old age pension and unemployment credits for draftees and national guardsmen called into active service.

The outlay for dependents is expected to be comparatively small at the start inasmuch as the gen-

Fast-Striking Italian Army in Action against British in Egypt

By The Associated Press

ROME, Sept. 18—The fast-striking army of Marshal Dodolfo Graziani spread southward from its new Egyptian base at Sidi Barrani today in an effort to mop up strong armored forces which the British have planted in desert ravines to conduct a "guerrilla warfare on wheels."

While the Italian blackshirts and native soldiers, attended by water carriers, headed on toward the Suez canal, the Fascist press extolled the "valor" of dusky Libyan warriors who, it was said, performed a march of sixty miles through the stifling heat and dust of a desert storm to capture Sidi Barrani in a surprise attack.

Await Von Ribbentrop

This taste of victory whetted interest in the expected arrival tomorrow of German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, who, some quarters believed would seek to coordinate Italy's blows at the British water "lifeline" with Germany's hammering at London.

Il Giornale D'Italia declared still-neutral Egypt would have to accept a "new order" from Italy, similar to the German domination over east and central western Europe.

With her forces already sixty miles inside Egyptian territory at Sidi Barrani, heat, lack of water and British resistance were the main concern of Italian strategists as they mapped the next advance toward Matruh, seventy-eight miles eastward on the Mediterranean.

Italians said about two and a half gallons of water are allotted to each man daily for drinking, bathing and the cooling of motors.

Firemen Wage Long Fight in Effort To Save Baltimore Stock

BALTIMORE, Sept 18. (AP). Firemen pouring incessant streams of water on charred, sodden masses of cork today won a 24-hour battle to snuff out a $500,000 fire that swept through a nine-acre storage yard at the Crown Cork and Seal Company's plant.

Bales of cork still smouldered in the yard but firemen had virtually quenched the blaze that broke out yesterday afternoon and within a few hours made a raging inferno of a year's supply of cork.

The fire department, sending fresh men to relieve the 400 who battled the blaze all night, said everything was under control. It listed twenty-three men as injured and said some fifty others received first aid treatment.

Although approximately 200 employees of the plant were idle today because of the fire, company officials said the plant soon would resume normal operations. The loss was covered by insurance.

Fire chief Howard Travers said there was no suspicion of sabotage, yet five members of the department's incendiary bureau were assigned to make an investigation and one man was arrested on a trespassing charge following the fire.

The blaze might have been started, fire department officials said, by spontaneous combustion, by a careless smoker or by a spark from a switch engine on tracks paralleling the yard.

Fifteen alarms were sounded and more than seventy pieces of apparatus were pressed into action.

Pinkney W. Wilson, secretary to the Board of Fire Commissioners, explaining why so many alarms were sounded, said a "general alarm" still was provided but was never used because calling all companies to one spot at one time caused to much jamming of apparatus.

12-ALARM FIRE RAZES BALTIMORE CORK COMPANY

The storage plant of the Crown Cork and Seal Company in Baltimore is shown as it was being leveled by a fire that required twelve alarms to bring under control. During the height of the blaze 500 volunteers were called from the onlooking crowd when it appeared that surrounding blocks of homes and business establishments were in danger. Authorities estimated that 100,000,000 bales of cork valued "at many hundreds of thousand dollars" were destroyed. The company was not engaged in national defense orders.

46 Nazi Planes Downed

British reports at 10 o'clock last night indicated that at least 46 German aircraft had been destroyed up to that time.

Early this morning, the scene along the French and Belgian coastlines was one of scarlet fury—a leaping medley light and fire from British bombs and parachute flares and Nazi ground guns. The long white beams of the searchlights stretched far out over the channel toward England.

The raid, intended to smash those Nazi facilities for invasion which are closest to England, began soon after 9 o'clock (3 p. m. EST) last night and hours later many miles of the French coast seemed ablaze.

Fresh squadrons of British bombers pounded first at the area of Boulogne and then widened their attack to a violent bombardment of the Calais region, where great fires sprang up into the night.

Early this morning German planes were over southeast, southwest and northwest England and Wales.

Bomb Thames Area

During yesterday's seven daylight attacks here, the air ministry said, not a bomb fell in the city itself, although explosives killed an undetermined number of persons along the Thames estuary.

But this morning and last night, in the long attack which began as the eighth alarm over London since dawn of Wednesday, it was a different story. Hardest hit appeared to be the swank west end, where several heavy bombs were heard to crash.

An ugly glow arose over the area, but firemen quickly stamped it out.

They worked quickly and successfully to extinguish the Nazi oil bombs as they fell, and scores of smaller incendiaries as well.

Edward Robinson, a telegraph operator for the Associated Press in London, walked through a western area of the city during the height of the attack and reported a Roman Catholic church was hit and its roof caved in.

Three fashionable apartment houses were struck by incendiary or high explosive bombs, he said, and seven bombs fell in a park.

Flight Broken Up

The mightiest of all the almost endless flights of daylight raiders never reached the city at all. It was broken up in a thunderous battle high over the Thames estuary by the coordinated counter-attack of British fighter pilots and the smoking anti-aircraft guns below.

Some 300 German planes were in this great wave and it was noted that the Nazi bombers were extraordinarily outnumbered by their protecting fighter craft.

Just as the invaders came in over the estuary, British fighter planes came down from above 15,000 feet; British interceptors rose angrily from below, and British guns bellowed in the crisp autumn air. At least ten Germans were reported shot down. Most of the rest, it was said, withdrew in disorder.

But despite this success, one of the greatest single British air victories of the war, other German raiders broke through the outer defenses all during the day. Those reaching London were in small units.

British Use New Weapon

Britain fought back with the old and tried means of defense—planes and anti-aircraft batteries — and likewise was disclosed to be experimenting with a mysterious new counter-weapon for stopping raiders. It was said to be neither a gun nor a ray; its nature was kept secret.

Whatever is to come, men with strong memories of the smashing of Warsaw, Barcelona, Madrid and Roterdam agreed that they had not been hit as heavily as had London.

But, in this group, the consensus nevertheless was that the Nazis had not achieved their main purposes: to disorganize London's communications as a preliminary to invasion and to demoralize the population.

The weather cleared during the day, and the sun shone intermittently on eastern England, but in the English channel the tides leaped up to their highest mark of the year.

Against this ever-present threat of invasion, the British bomber command carried on its endless campaign of counter-attack.

Heavy and repeated bombing attacks Tuesday night upon German-held ports were declared to have left "much damage." Cherbourg, France, was heavily bombed, for one. Two supply ships were sunk, and many fires were left blazing in the harbor.

that he knew of no way to get votes except to "be frank and candid."

"I want to carry California," he said, "and I want to get it on the basis of the principles I represent."

Domestic Economy Is Urged by Willkie

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 18 (AP) — Rehabilitation of domestic economy is as vital as building a strong national defense, Wendell L. Willkie declared today during a brief stop on an airplane flight from Albuquerque, N. M., to Los Angeles.

The Republican presidential nominee told a crowd estimated by Police Captain E. W. Titel at 15,000 that he possessed the experience to bring about a revitalized economic situation.

"We must build a force of airplanes and armament so strong that no dictator will dare to strike," Willkie said. "But that will not be adequate to carry America through this trying time. We must rehabilitate our domestic economy.

Economy Comes First

If there were a choice between the building of national defense and domestic economic revitalization, Willkie said he would place his faith in the latter.

He asserted that if the rulers of Europe "could look across the ocean and see a great people at work," they never would attack the United States.

"Democracy can survive a long period of time only if it is prosperous," he said.

The nominee spoke under a broiling sun which forced him to remove his vest as he stepped from the last of three twenty-one passenger planes which brought his campaign party from Albuquerque.

The administration, he said, has increased the national debt, but still there remain more than 9,000,000 unemployed.

Refers to Public Debt

"All that tremendous public debt will be added to your burden," he declared.

"Anyone who understands the functioning of the American economic system — and may I say that I do — can rebuild the domestic economy so that all those on relief and all those unemployed will find jobs."

The crowd cheered when the nominee criticized the federal purchase of Argentine beef, which has been vigorously opposed by Arizona.

Paul McNutt To Address Democrats

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18 (AP)—Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, will speak tomorrow night at a mass meeting of Carlin's arena, Maryland Democratic campaign headquarters announced tonight.

McNutt, making his first political address since the Democratic convention, will discuss "the differences between the two parties." National Committeeman William Preston Lane will preside.

Five Communists Held for Perjury

Presentments Handed Down against Mrs. Blumberg

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18. (AP) — A Baltimore grand jury today presented Mrs. Dorothy Blumberg, wife of Dr. Albert Blumberg, Maryland Communist party secretary, and four other persons on charges of perjury in connection with an investigation of the party's nominating petition for the fall election.

(In Annapolis, meanwhile, Blumberg filed suit to enjoin the secretary of state from refusing to certify the names of Communist candidates for insertion on the November ballot.)

Others presented by the jury were Sophie Kaplan, Minnie Stambler, Paul J. Jarvis, and Benjamin Davis. Bail for each was set at $2,000.

Bail was set at $1,000 in each of eleven charges brought against Mrs. Blumberg. All five persons surrendered to deputies of Sheriff Joseph C. Deegan through Leo Alpert, attorney retained by the Communist party.

Alpert said he would seek reduction of the bail.

The charges in each instance accused the defendants of "falsely making an oath and affirmation in an affidavit required" by Maryland law "in connection with a petition for nomination of candidates for the Communist party in the general election" in November.

The presentments were handed down after State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells and his assistant, Thomas N. Biddison, took before the jury about fifteen or twenty-three witnesses summoned in the investigation.

Mrs. Florence K. Schwartz, notary before whom various affidavits had been made, was named as a witness on court papers in most of the cases.

Show Cause Order Issued at Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 18 (AP)—Secretary of State Francis Petrott today was given until Sept. 28 to show cause why he should not certify the names of three Communist party candidates for inclusion on Maryland's November election ballot.

Judge Ridgely P. Melvin, of the Anne Arundel county circuit court, signed the order after Albert E. Blumberg, Communist candidate candidate for the United States Senate, instituted suit against Petrott to make him certify Blumberg, Earl Browder, Communist candidate for president, and James W. Ford, Communist vice-presidential candidate.

Blumberg, through his attorney Leo M. Alpert, said Aug. 30 the Dies House Committee had alleged there were irregularities in connection with the Communist party's nominating petition.

The state's attorney of Baltimore, he continued, is now investigating whether any criminal laws were violated in the obtaining of signatures for the nominating petition.

Governor O'Conor, he said, directed Petrott to withhold certifying the three candidates to the boards of election supervisors pending outcome of the investigation.

Blumberg declared that the governor's order caused "great uncertainty, insecurity and confusion" as to whether the three candidates had qualified.

He added that, because of the pending investigation, broadcasting companies would not sell time to the candidates.

He asserted that the Communist party had "received . . . without misrepresentation or fraud on its part or on the part of its officers," 2,068 signatures nominating the three party candidates.

Petrott, Blumberg claimed, has "no authority or warrant in law" to withhold certification of the candidates to the election boards.

A total of 3,325,009 cubic yards of concrete were poured for the Grand Coulee dam in the twelve months ending in July, 1940.

Violet Long To Know Her Fate In Few Hours

New Martinsville Murder Case Nearly Ready To Be Given Jury

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 18 (AP)—Attorneys in the Violet Delaney Long murder trial summed up their contentions tonight before a jury expected to begin deliberating the case of the seventeen-year-old mother and widow within a few hours.

Before final arguments began, the jurors were instructed by Circuit Judge James Shipman that they might return any of five possible verdicts, including first degree murder, second degree murder, voluntary and involuntary manslaughter or acquittal.

The girl, accused of shooting her husband to death last February at their Silver Hill farm home, asserted defiantly today under cross-examination that the killing was accidental.

Her usual calm deserted her however, and she snapped curt answers to the questions of Acting Prosecutor W. J. Postlewaite, reluctantly admitting she had left her husband on a number of occasions.

Mrs. Long, a child bride at twelve and now the mother of two children, admitted she and her twenty-seven-year-old husband "didn't get along," but said that hard language and threats she made in his presence were to "scare" him.

Reviewing her married life, which began five years ago, Mrs. Long said her husband quarreled with her frequently because "nothing suited him" but that he was "king in a way, whenever he took a notion." She said she liked rim even though they quarreled.

The girl, whose four-weeks-old baby has been with her in the court room, asserted Long frequently mistreated her, slapping and shaking her.

Throughout cross-examination she insisted she had not known the gun was loaded and had not intended to kill her husband, though admitting she fired the fatal shot.

Lane Says Willkie's Campaign Is Based On Rash Expediency

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18 (AP) — Democratic National Committeeman W. Preston Lane tonight charged that Wendell L. Willkie's presidential campaign "is one of rash expediency based entirely upon the design to make votes on false issues, half-truths, or untruths."

Lane, addressing a meeting of the eleventh ward Democratic club, said that "in contrast, we present a record of seven years of progressive accomplishment in humanitarian legislation, and in consistent effort to preserve the peace of this country and to promote world peace."

He said "there is nothing in Mr. Willkie's record which would influence us to believe he could better administer the laws which the Roosevelt administration has devised for the welfare of all the people, and certainly the record of opposition of the Republican leadership, both in and out of Congress, to the enactment of those laws should be evidence enough of their ultimate fate should the Republican party be placed in control of the government."

Londoners Spend Much Time in Shelters

If You're Crazy Or In Jail You May Escape Draft

Also Your Wife's Health May Enable You To Avoid Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—Are you a patient of an asylum? What is your income? How is your wife's health? Are you a licensed marine pilot? Do you have a hobby? Are you in jail?

These and 100 or so other questions will be asked of the 16,500,000 men of twenty-one through thirty-five who will be required to register for military service on Oct. 16.

Although the questionnaire has not been drafted in final form, the war department says it will follow closely the pattern of a sample questionnaire prepared some time ago for use in case of war. The sample states flatly that the "nation is at war and every registrant is thus put on notice to know his position and duty." Since this is to be a peace-time draft, the war department says the "nation-at-war" phrase will be eliminated.

Five Days To Answer

Present plans call for distribution of the questionnaires soon after registration day and for their return within five days. On the basis of the replies, the local selective service boards will determine the classification of registrants. Some will be deferred and others will be marked as eligible for immediate service.

Some of the sample questions follow:

1. Have you any physical defect?
2. Are you single, married, widowed or divorced?
3. In what calling, if any, is your wife trained or skilled?
4. State your total income from all sources during the last twelve months.
5. Do you or any of your family or dependents own the house in which you live?
6. What is your usual occupation?
7. Are there any other things (including hobbies) that you do well?
8. Of what well-recognized religious sect or organization opposed to war are you a member?
9. From what port do you regularly sail? (If a licensed marine pilot).

Clause for Ministers

10. Are you now authorized to preach or promulgate the doctrines of your religion? (This section applies to ministers who intend to claim deferred classification).
11. How many years have you been engaged in agriculture (if you have) and what special training have you had?
12. Why cannot any one or more of your relatives, or some other person, continue your farm operations during your absence?

(Persons employed in agricultural pursuits may claim deferred status, but the questionnaire covering this claim must be accompanied by a supporting affidavit.)

13. To what country do you owe allegiance?

(If you are not a citizen of the United States you will be asked various other questions concerning the country in which you formerly resided, whether you have taken out first citizenship papers, whether your parents are naturalized, etc.)

14. Have you ever been convicted of a crime?
15. Do you claim deferred classification? If so, on which of the following grounds: physical condition, dependency, occupation, alien status, or moral unfitness.

Barlow's Tax Is Cut to 10 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP) — The Senate answered today a tax protest from Lester P. Barlow, bomb inventor, by voting to limit to ten per cent the federal taxes to be imposed on a $592,719 sum recently voted him by Congress.

Barlow, after winning the half-million dollar award for infringement of his aerial bomb patents during the World war, publicly complained that federal taxes would take eighty per cent of this.

ed by shorthand secretaries, Gandhi answered questions.

"Because non-violence is a congress creed involving congress' hostility to all war," he said, "it is a vital necessity that congress not identify itself with any war.

"Hence my desire not to embarrass Britain was necessarily limited and conditionel by the counter-necessity for continued congress existence.

Therefore I promised that civil disobedience would be definitely restricted to freedom of speech, provided it is absolutely non-violent."

Gandhi indicated he would not "be at all pleased at the prospect of Nazi victory," and added:

"What terrifies me is that, as things are presently going, defeat of Naziism must be bought at a terrific price—namely a superior Naziism of brute force, call it what you will."

Senator Brown Seeks To Tax All Government Securities in Future

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—Senator Brown (D-Mich), pressing for legislation to make the interest from all future government securities subject to taxation, told the Senate today that existing tax exemptions on such securities constituted "an unjust legal escape" which benefitted the wealthy.

"Our taxation falls heavier on the poor man and lighter on the rich man," he said.

Brown spoke in behalf of an amendment to the excess profits tax bill. Under this amendment, the federal government could tax the income from future state and local securities, and vice versa.

Senator Austin (R-Vt) told the chamber that Mrown's proposal was unconstitutional because the constitution gave state and federal governments "implied immunity" from reciprocal taxation.

Asserting that "the power to tax is the power to destroy," Austin told his colleagues that "if we should pass this we would have opened the door to complete control of every municipality in the country by the federal government."

Senator Bailey (D-NC) joined the debate to declare that the government "now is in sight of a national debt of $75,000,000,000 and that is more of a menace to the welfare of the American people than any possible foreign invasion."

Opposing the Brown amendment, Bailey said tax exemptions were provided "not for the sake of the purchaser but for the sake of the state to get a lower rate of interest."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A dreadful moonlight sonata of German bomb attack battered Londoners as the fourth month of the battle of Britain opened. How many civilians lives were lost in that deluge of destruction, which descended on the great, sprawling city for nearly ten hours, can only be conjectured.

Yet there are circumstances surround the fight for air mastery that are definitely heartening for Britishers. The prompt results by Royal Air Force fighters of Nazi planes which sought to make a follow-up flight to London in the daytime emphasizes Prime Minister Winston Churchill's contention that daylight mastery of the air is the "crux" of the battle.

Weather Most Important

Without that, German invasion of England would be a desperate venture, even with assurances of a prolonged spell of favorable weather for a channel crossing. There can be no such assurances at this season of the year. The near-Gale that swept the channel September 17 served notice of that.

Neutral eye witnesses in posts of vantage on Britain's channel coast reported that the Nazi follow-up daylight flight, estimated to include 300 or more planes, was more heavily escorted by German fighter ships than any previous thrust at England. Yet it was quickly turned back short of London.

And if British figures on air loss ratios during the last three months are anywhere near accuracy, daylight air mastery over England appears farther from Germany's grasp today than it was June 18, when the battle of Britain began with the surrender of France.

British Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair has issued specific figures on losses for the period from August 8 to September 18. Against 621 British planes of all types downed, he asserted that 1,867 Nazi aircraft had been destroyed. Against less than 600 Royal Air Force flying personnel lost, he scored against Germany 4,000 airmen killed or captured.

Those figures bear out the Churchill three-to-one and six-to-one loss ratios favoring Britain. If they are even reasonably correct, it follows that the flower of the Nazi air fighters has been expended, yet Britain's relative strength in air has increased instead of decreased since June 18.

eral policy is not to draft men with dependent relatives at present, but to place them in a deferred classification. However, they may be drafted later.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt, just back from attending the funeral of Speaker Bankhead at Jasper, Ala., prepared to sign tomorrow the first of a series of executive orders governing the administration of the draft, and the enrollment, classification and selection of conscripts.

May Name Director

In addition, he is expected to appoint a director of the draft within a few days. Probabilities point toward Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Hershey for the job. At present he is executive officer of the joint army-navy committee which has spent fourteen years perfecting plans for conscription.

Preparations of the war department, it was said, have progressed to a point at which money still to be appropriated had been tentatively allocated to the states for the printing of forms incident to the registration. The money actually is included in a $2,000,000,000 appropriation bill now pending before a House committee.

It was announced, too, that the department would shortly order some 300 additional national guard officers to active duty as advisors to state officials in connection with the draft, with two or three each assigned to the smaller states, and as many as ten to the more populous states.

They are not to serve on the draft boards. The latter are to consist entirely of civilians selected by the governors and recommended to the president for these posts.

Hoover Predicts Disaster for U. S. If We Enter War

Declares Free Economy in the World Would Be Destroyed for Generation

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (AP), Former President Hoover declared tonight that entrance of the United States into the European war would put this nation under a "totalitarian dictatorship" and destroy any hope of maintained free economy in the world for a generation."

After and "so-called peace," he said in an address prepared for an economic symposium at the University of Pennsylvania's bicentennial celebration," the idea of the free states combing against the totalitarian nations in trade is nonsense. The world has to live."

Hoover predicted the British empire eventually will triumph "in its heroic defense" and asserted that it is time the United States begins to think about "economic defenses" against what is to come after the conflict ends.

His speech, which he termed non-political "despite the intellectural climate of a national campaign," was broadcast.

Offers Economic Measures

Declaring that "we cannot refuse to consider economic defense weapons any more than we can refuse to consider building airplanes," Hoover suggested these economic measures:

1. Increased "Industrial efficiency," based on scientific research which would discover "new articles and services."
2. Self-containment: "We may be forced either by economics or military necessities to free ourselves from dependence on overseas supplies."
3. Imposition of foreign trade quotas. "The quota is far more ironclad than tariffs, and the reciprocal quotas more potent than reciprocal tariffs against the economic dive-bombers of the 'new era.'"

Certainly if the United States join in this war we would inevitably become a totalitarian dictatorship ourselves and any hope of maintained free economy in the world would be gone for a generation," Hoover said.

Disarmament Unlikely

The initial form of any peace to come, he added, would be "merely a suspension of mass killings, with disarmament as the "most unlikely of all outcomes."

He pictured a period of devaluation, inflation or repudiation in some form following peace; also "for a long time to come, the function of gold in settlement of international balances will be greatly limited."

Increased industrial efficiency would be the nation's primary bulwark against "grave economic dangers" in the future. This would include "constructive tax systems and removal of unnecessary governmental restriction which lessen or destroy the initiative of men."

Wisconsin Republicans nominated Fred H. Clausen, a farm machinery manufacturer, for senator, and the Democrats chose James E. Finnegan, anti-third termer and former attorney general. Senator Robert M. Lafollette was unopposed for renomination on the Progressive ticket.

In the Massachusetts senatorial election in November, the voters will choose between Senator David I. Walsh, who was renominated without opposition, and Henry Parkman, former corporation counsel of Boston.

Another political development Wednesday was an announcement by Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old age pension leader, that he would campaign actively for the Willkie-McNary ticket. He said at a press conference in New York that he would make a 6,000 mile trip in behalf of the Republican candidates. At the same time, he said, he would speak for his pension plan.

Ruley said a city park official once spent most of the afternoon crawling around the cellar looking for some sign of the "missing" cornerstone.

"I'd like to find it myself," Ruley mused. "It's been circulated around that there is some very valuable historical material in the cornerstone."

Firemen Wage Long Fight in Effort To Save Baltimore Stock

BALTIMORE, Sept 18. (AP) Firemen pouring incessant streams of water on charred, sodden masses of cork today won a 24-hour battle to snuff out a $500,000 fire that swept through a nine-acre storage yard at the Crown Cork and Seal Company's plant.

Bales of cork still smouldered in the yard but firemen had virtually quenched the blaze that broke out yesterday afternoon and within a few hours made a raging inferno of a year's supply of cork.

The fire department, sending fresh men to relieve the 400 who battled the blaze all night, said everything was under control. It listed twenty-three men as injured and said some fifty others received first aid treatment.

Although approximately 200 employees of the plant were idle today because of the fire, company officials said the plant soon would resume normal operations. The loss was covered by insurance.

Fire chief Howard Travers said there was no suspicion of sabotage, yet five members of the department's incendiary bureau were assigned to make an investigation and one man was arrested on a trespassing charge following the fire.

The blaze might have been started, fire department officials said, by spontaneous combustion, by a careless smoker or by a spark from a switch engine on tracks paralleling the yard.

Fifteen alarms were sounded and more than seventy pieces of apparatus were pressed into action.

Pinkney W. Wilson, secretary to the Board of Fire Commissioners, explaining why so many alarms were sounded, said a "general alarm" still was provided but was never used because calling all companies to one spot at one time caused to much jamming of apparatus.

12-ALARM FIRE RAZES BALTIMORE CORK COMPANY

The storage plant of the Crown Cork and Seal Company in Baltimore is shown as it was being leveled by a fire that required twelve alarms to bring under control. During the height of the blaze 500 volunteers were called from the onlooking crowd when it appeared that surrounding blocks of homes and business establishments were in danger. Authorities estimated that 100,000,000 bales of cork valued "at many hundreds of thousand dollars" were destroyed. The company was not engaged in national defense orders.

46 Nazi Planes Downed

British reports at 10 o'clock last night indicated that at least 46 German aircraft had been destroyed up to that time.

Early this morning, the scene along the French and Belgian coastlines was one of scarlet fury—a leaping medley light and fire from British bombs and parachute flares and Nazi ground guns. The long white beams of the searchlights stretched far out over the channel toward England.

The raid, intended to smash those Nazi facilities for invasion which are closest to England, began soon after 9 o'clock (3 p. m. EST) last night and hours later many miles of the French coast seemed ablaze.

Fresh squadrons of British bombers pounded first at the area of Boulogne and then widened their attack to a violent bombardment of the Calais region, where great fires sprang up into the night.

Early this morning German planes were over southeast, southwest and northwest England and Wales.

Bomb Thames Area

During yesterday's seven daylight attacks here, the air ministry said, not a bomb fell in the city itself, although explosives killed an undetermined number of persons along the Thames estuary.

But this morning and last night, in the long attack which began as the eighth alarm over London since dawn of Wednesday, it was a different story. Hardest hit appeared to be the swank west end, where several heavy bombs were heard to crash.

An ugly glow arose over the area, but firemen quickly stamped it out.

They worked quickly and successfully to extinguish the Nazi oil bombs as they fell, and scores of smaller incendiaries as well.

Edward Robinson, a telegraph operator for the Associated Press in London, walked through a western area of the city during the height of the attack and reported a Roman Catholic church was hit and its roof caved in.

Three fashionable apartment houses were struck by incendiary or high explosive bombs, he said, and seven bombs fell in a park.

Flight Broken Up

The mightiest of all the almost endless flights of daylight raiders never reached the city at all. It was broken up in a thunderous battle high over the Thames estuary by the coordinated counter-attack of British fighter pilots and the smoking anti-aircraft guns below.

Some 300 German planes were in this great wave and it was noted that the Nazi bombers were extraordinarily outnumbered by their protecting fighter craft.

Just as the invaders came in over the estuary, British fighter planes came down from above 15,000 feet; British interceptors rose angrily from below, and British guns bellowed in the crisp autumn air. At least ten Germans were reported shot down. Most of the rest, it was said, withdrew in disorder.

But despite this success, one of the greatest single British air victories of the war, other German raiders broke through the outer defenses all during the day. Those reaching London were in small units.

British Use New Weapon

Britain fought back with the old and tried means of defense—planes and anti-aircraft batteries — and likewise was disclosed to be experimenting with a mysterious new counter-weapon for stopping raiders. It was said to be neither a gun nor a ray; its nature was kept secret.

Whatever is to come, men with strong memories of the smashing of Warsaw, Barcelona, Madrid and Roterdam agreed that they had not been hit as heavily as had London.

But, in this group, the consensus nevertheless was that the Nazis had not achieved their main purposes: to disorganize London's communications as a preliminary to invasion and to demoralize the population.

The weather cleared during the day, and the sun shone intermittently on eastern England, but in the English channel the tides leaped up to their highest mark of the year.

Against this ever-present threat of invasion, the British bomber command carried on its endless campaign of counter-attack.

Heavy and repeated bombing attacks Tuesday night upon German-held ports were declared to have left "much damage." Cherbourg, France, was heavily bombed, for one. Two supply ships were sunk, and many fires were left blazing in the harbor.

"I want to carry California," he said, "and I want to get it on the basis of the principles I represent."

Domestic Economy Is Urged by Willkie

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 18 (AP) — Rehabilitation of domestic economy is as vital as building a strong national defense, Wendell L. Willkie declared today during a brief stop on an airplane flight from Albuquerque, N. M., to Los Angeles.

The Republican presidential nominee told a crowd estimated by Police Captain E. W. Titel at 15,000 that he possessed the experience to bring about a revitalized economic situation.

"We must build a force of airplanes and armament so strong that no dictator will dare to strike," Willkie said. "But that will not be adequate to carry America through this trying time. We must rehabilitate our domestic economy.

Economy Comes First

If there were a choice between the building of national defense and domestic economic revitalization, Willkie said he would place his faith in the latter.

He asserted that if the rulers of Europe "could look across the ocean and see a great people at work," they never would attack the United States.

"Democracy can survive a long period of time only if it is prosperous," he said.

The nominee spoke under a broiling sun which forced him to remove his vest as he stepped from the last of three twenty-one passenger planes which brought his campaign party from Albuquerque.

The administration, he said, has increased the national debt, but still there remain more than 9,000,000 unemployed.

Refers to Public Debt

"All that tremendous public debt will be added to your burden," he declared.

"Anyone who understands the functioning of the American economic system — and may I say that I do — can rebuild the domestic economy so that all those on relief and all those unemployed will find jobs."

The crowd cheered when the nominee criticized the federal purchase of Argentine beef, which has been vigorously opposed by Arizona.

Paul McNutt To Address Democrats

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18 (AP)—Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, will speak tomorrow night at a mass meeting of Carlin's arena, Maryland Democratic campaign headquarters announced tonight.

McNutt, making his first political address since the Democratic convention, will discuss "the differences between the two parties." National Committeeman William Preston Lane will preside.

Five Communists Held for Perjury

Presentments Handed Down against Mrs. Blumberg

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18. (AP) — A Baltimore grand jury today presented Mrs. Dorothy Blumberg, wife of Dr. Albert Blumberg, Maryland Communist party secretary, and four other persons on charges of perjury in connection with an investigation of the party's nominating petition for the fall election.

(In Annapolis, meanwhile, Blumberg filed suit to enjoin the secretary of state from refusing to certify the names of Communist candidates for insertion on the November ballot.)

Others presented by the jury were Sophie Kaplan, Minnie Stambler, Paul J. Jarvis, and Benjamin Davis. Bail for each was set at $2,000.

Bail was set at $1,000 in each of eleven charges brought against Mrs. Blumberg. All five persons surrendered to deputies of Sheriff Joseph C. Deegan through Leo Alpert, attorney retained by the Communist party.

Alpert said he would seek reduction of the bail.

The charges in each instance accused the defendants of "falsely making an oath and affirmation in an affidavit required" by Maryland law "in connection with a petition for nomination of candidates for the Communist party in the general election" in November.

The presentments were handed down after State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells and his assistant, Thomas N. Biddison, took before the jury about fifteen or twenty-three witnesses summoned in the investigation.

Mrs. Florence K. Schwartz, notary before whom various affidavits had been made, was named as a witness on court papers in most of the cases.

Show Cause Order Issued at Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 18 (AP)—Secretary of State Francis Petrott today was given until Sept. 28 to show cause why he should not certify the names of three Communist party candidates for inclusion on Maryland's November election ballot.

Judge Ridgely P. Melvin, of the Anne Arundel county circuit court, signed the order after Albert E. Blumberg, Communist candidate candidate for the United States Senate, instituted suit against Petrott to make him certify Blumberg, Earl Browder, Communist candidate for president, and James W. Ford, Communist vice-presidential candidate.

Blumberg, through his attorney Leo M. Alpert, said Aug. 30 the Dies House Committee had alleged there were irregularities in connection with the Communist party's nominating petition.

The state's attorney of Baltimore, he continued, is now investigating whether any criminal laws were violated in the obtaining of signatures for the nominating petition.

Governor O'Conor, he said, directed Petrott to withhold certifying the three candidates to the boards of election supervisors pending outcome of the investigation.

Blumberg declared that the governor's order caused "great uncertainty, insecurity and confusion" as to whether the three candidates had qualified.

He added that, because of the pending investigation, broadcasting companies would not sell time to the candidates.

He asserted that the Communist party had "received . . . without misrepresentation or fraud on its part or on the part of its officers," 2,068 signatures nominating the three party candidates.

Petrott, Blumberg claimed, has "no authority or warrant in law" to withhold certification of the candidates to the election boards.

A total of 3,325,009 cubic yards of concrete were poured for the Grand Coulee dam in the twelve months ending in July, 1940.

Violet Long To Know Her Fate In Few Hours

New Martinsville Murder Case Nearly Ready To Be Given Jury

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 18 (AP)—Attorneys in the Violet Delaney Long murder trial summed up their contentions tonight before a jury expected to begin deliberating the case of the seventeen-year-old mother and widow within a few hours.

Before final arguments began, the jurors were instructed by Circuit Judge James Shipman that they might return any of five possible verdicts, including first degree murder, second degree murder, voluntary and involuntary manslaughter or acquittal.

The girl, accused of shooting her husband to death last February at their Silver Hill farm home, asserted defiantly today under cross-examination that the killing was accidental.

Her usual calm deserted her however, and she snapped curt answers to the questions of Acting Prosecutor W. J. Postlewaite, reluctantly admitting she had left her husband on a number of occasions.

Mrs. Long, a child bride at twelve and now the mother of two children, admitted she and her twenty-seven-year-old husband "didn't get along," but said that hard language and threats she made in his presence were to "scare" him.

Reviewing her married life, which began five years ago, Mrs. Long said her husband quarreled with her frequently because "nothing suited him" but that he was "king in a way, whenever he took a notion." She said she liked him even though they quarreled.

The girl, whose four-weeks-old baby has been with her in the court room, asserted Long frequently mistreated her, slapping and shaking her.

Throughout cross-examination she insisted she had not known the gun was loaded and had not intended to kill her husband, though admitting she fired the fatal shot.

Lane Says Willkie's Campaign Is Based On Rash Expediency

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18 (AP) — Democratic National Committeeman W. Preston Lane tonight charged that Wendell L. Willkie's presidential campaign "is one of rash expediency based entirely upon the design to make votes on false issues, half-truths, or untruths."

Lane, addressing a meeting of the eleventh ward Democratic club, said that "in contrast, we present a record of seven years of progressive accomplishment in humanitarian legislation, and in consistent effort to preserve the peace of this country and to promote world peace."

He said "there is nothing in Mr. Willkie's record which would influence us to believe he could better administer the laws which the Roosevelt administration has devised for the welfare of all the people, and certainly the record of opposition of the Republican leadership, both in and out of Congress, to the enactment of those laws should be evidence enough of their ultimate fate should the Republican party be placed in control of the government."

If You're Crazy Or In Jail You May Escape Draft

Also Your Wife's Health May Enable You To Avoid Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—Are you a patient of an asylum? What is your income? How is your wife's health? Are you a licensed marine pilot? Do you have a hobby? Are you in jail?

These and 100 or so other questions will be asked of the 16,500,000 men of twenty-one through thirty-five who will be required to register for military service on Oct. 16.

Although the questionnaire has not been drafted in final form, the war department says it will follow closely the pattern of a sample questionnaire prepared some time ago for use in case of war. The sample states flatly that the "nation is at war and every registrant is thus put on notice to know his position and duty." Since this is to be a peace-time draft, the war department says the "nation-at-war" phrase will be eliminated.

Five Days To Answer

Present plans call for distribution of the questionnaires soon after registration day and for their return within five days. On the basis of the replies, the local selective service boards will determine the classification of registrants. Some will be deferred and others will be marked as eligible for immediate service.

Some of the sample questions follow:

1. Have you any physical defect?
2. Are you single, married, widowed or divorced?
3. In what calling, if any, is your wife trained or skilled?
4. State your total income from all sources during the last twelve months.
5. Do you or any of your family or dependents own the house in which you live?
6. What is your usual occupation?
7. Are there any other things (including hobbies) that you do well?
8. Of what well-recognized religious sect or organization opposed to war are you a member?
9. From what port do you regularly sail? (If a licensed marine pilot).

Clause for Ministers

10. Are you now authorized to preach or promulgate the doctrines of your religion? (This section applies to ministers who intend to claim deferred classification).
11. How many years have you been engaged in agriculture (if you have) and what special training have you had?
12. Why cannot any one or more of your relatives, or some other person, continue your farm operations during your absence?

(Persons employed in agricultural pursuits may claim deferred status, but the questionnaire covering this claim must be accompanied by a supporting affidavit.)

13. To what country do you owe allegiance?

(If you are not a citizen of the United States you will be asked various other questions concerning the country in which you formerly resided, whether you have taken out first citizenship papers, whether your parents are naturalized, etc.)

14. Have you ever been convicted of a crime?
15. Do you claim deferred classification? If so, on which of the following grounds: physical condition, dependency, occupation, alien status, or moral unfitness.

Barlow's Tax Is Cut to 10 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP) — The Senate answered today a tax protest from Lester P. Barlow, bomb inventor, by voting to limit to ten per cent the federal taxes to be imposed on a $592,719 sum recently voted him by Congress.

Barlow, after winning the half-million dollar award for infringement of his aerial bomb patents during the World war, publicly complained that federal taxes would take eighty per cent of this.

Chairman Sheppard (D-Texas) of the Senate Military Committee won Senate approval of an amendment to the excess profits tax bill which would limit the federal taxes to ten per cent.

"Because non-violence is a congress creed involving congress' hostility to all war," he said, "it is a vital necessity that congress not identify itself with any war.

"Hence my desire not to embarrass Britain was necessarily limited and conditionel by the counter-necessity for continued congress existence.

Therefore I promised that civil disobedience would be definitely restricted to freedom of speech, provided it is absolutely non-violent."

Gandhi indicated he would not "be at all pleased at the prospect of Nazi victory," and added:

"What terrifies me is that, as things are presently going, defeat of Naziism must be bought at a terrific price—namely a superior Naziism of brute force, call it what you will."

Senator Brown Seeks To Tax All Government Securities in Future

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP) — Senator Brown (D-Mich), pressing for legislation to make the interest from all future government securities subject to taxation, told the Senate today that existing tax exemptions on such securities constituted "an unjust legal escape" which benefitted the wealthy.

"Our taxation falls heavier on the poor man and lighter on the rich man," he said.

Brown spoke in behalf of an amendment to the excess profits tax bill. Under this amendment, the federal government could tax the income from future state and local securities, and vice versa.

Senator Austin (R-Vt) told the chamber that Mrown's proposal was unconstitutional because the constitution gave state and federal governments "implied immunity" from reciprocal taxation.

Asserting that "the power to tax is the power to destroy," Austin told his colleagues that "if we should pass this we would have opened the door to complete control of every municipality in the country by the federal government."

Senator Bailey (D-NC) joined the debate to declare that the government "now is in sight of a national debt of $75,000,000,000 and that is more of a menace to the welfare of the American people than any possible foreign invasion."

Opposing the Brown amendment, Bailey said tax exemptions were provided "not for the sake of the purchaser but for the sake of the state to get a lower rate of interest."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A dreadful moonlight sonata of German bomb attack battered Londoners as the fourth month of the battle of Britain opened. How many civilians lives were lost in that deluge of destruction, which descended on the great, sprawling city for nearly ten hours, can only be conjectured.

Yet there are circumstances surround the fight for air mastery that are definitely heartening for Britishers. The prompt results by Royal Air Force fighters of Nazi planes which sought to make a follow-up flight to London in the daytime emphasizes Prime Minister Winston Churchill's contention that daylight mastery of the air is the "crux" of the battle.

Weather Most Important

Without that, German invasion of England would be a desperate venture, even with assurances of a prolonged spell of favorable weather for a channel crossing. There can be no such assurances at this season of the year. The near-Gale that swept the channel September 17 served notice of that.

Neutral eye witnesses in posts of vantage on Britain's channel coast reported that the Nazi follow-up daylight flight, estimated to include 300 or more planes, was more heavily escorted by German fighter ships than any previous thrust at England. Yet it was quickly turned back short of London.

And if British figures on air loss ratios during the last three months are anywhere near accuracy, daylight air mastery over England appears farther from Germany's grasp today than it was June 18, when the battle of Britain began with the surrender of France.

British Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair has issued specific figures on losses for the period from August 8 to September 18. Against 621 British planes of all types downed, he asserted that 1,867 Nazi aircraft had been destroyed. Against less than 600 Royal Air Force flying personnel lost, he scored against Germany 4,000 airmen killed or captured.

Those figures bear out the Churchill three-to-one and six-to-one loss ratios favoring Britain. If they are even reasonably correct, it follows that the flower of the Nazi air fighters has been expended, yet Britain's relative strength in air has increased instead of decreased since June 18.

"I'd like to find it myself," mused. "It's been circulated a that there is some very va historical material in the c stone."

What for instance?

Pinned down, Ruley suggeste documents, books, newspapers.

"And," he observed, "I'm drinking man, but I'll bet are a couple of bottles of ra Maryland rye."

The Draft Questionnaire And Our War Status

THOSE who read the reproduction of the questionnaire for the draft published in yesterday's News experienced quite a shock in noting a declaration therein that the nation is at war.

The declaration is contained in paragraph 8 of the instructions applicants are asked to read before filling it out.

"When a notice is posted in the office of your local board affecting you," it reads, "you are bound to perform the duty required even if no notice reaches you by mail. The nation is at war and every registrant is thus put on notice to know his position and duty." (The italics are the News's).

Naturally that statement aroused a lot of pertinent questions: Is the nation at war? Is the administration at Washington assuming that we shall be in war before the drafting is completed and has printed this bald declaration as a means of saving the time and expense of reprinting the questionnaires? Is the Washington government leading us into war?

Those are serious questions, indeed.

There was no explanation accompanying the reproduction of the questionnaire received by the News from one of its syndicate services other than it was a copy of the official blank designed for use under the new conscription bill.

This newspaper is inclined to the opinion that the government has planned to use the same questionnaires that were used in the World war, and that copy of the old form was brought into use without careful editing.

But, it seems rather queer that there should be any lack of care about that.

Care Necessary in Aiding Motor Accident Victims

MOTORISTS who are inexperienced in first aid methods are urged by the Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland, to be extremely careful in the handling of highway accident victims. The caution is urged at the request of hospital authorities.

Well-intentioned motorists, it is pointed out, often aggravate injuries in their laudable, but unskilled, efforts to render assistance.

The best practice, according to medical authorities, is, in the case of broken bones, to make the patient as comfortable as possible at the scene of the accident and await the arrival of doctor or ambulance. In cases of bleeding, the "Good Samaritans" should apply a tourniquet before taking a patient to a hospital.

"The natural impulse of those who are first to reach highway accident victims is to get the patients to a hospital or doctor with utmost haste," said Edward P. Curran, Keystone safety director. "However, the well-intentioned motorist may, by inexperienced handling, change a simple fracture of arm or leg into a more serious injury. In frenzied haste to reach doctor or hospital, improvised ambulances frequently are involved in accidents through disregard of traffic regulations, in some cases causing additional injury or even death to the original victims."

It is important, as Curran says, that utmost care be taken both in the handling of the injured and in transporting them from the scene of accident as lives can be saved and injuries minimized if proper precautions are observed.

A Grave Peril That Faces This Nation

ONE of the things Mr. Willkie is stressing with all the emphasis at his command—and it cannot be too strongly impressed—is the perilous situation faced by the nation as a result of the huge runaway public debt given us by the New Deal administration, and the utter disregard of any plan or effort to check it by giving heed to fiscal affairs on the part of Mr. Roosevelt and his sophoromic advisers.

That peril is real and embodies grave consequences unless something within reason is done about it and done soon.

If this runaway debt is allowed to continue, it will bring the country to the point where government bonds, after the banks are choked with all they can be forced to take, will not be purchased by men at par.

This is no mere academic speculation. History shows that this is the inevitable disastrous result when any government fails to safeguard its own securities or when it issues too many of them.

If the debt is allowed to run away beyond control, it will become unpayable and when that point is reached, the prices of government bonds will collapse, and when that collapse occurs it will be widespread and disastrous. It will be more severe and more destructive than anything this country has ever before experienced by reason of the simple fact that the government debt is now of astronomical proportions.

What will happen when the prices of government bonds collapse? A Baltimore Sun editorial foresees the consequence. "When they collapse," it says, "the value of assets in every bank and insurance company will collapse. There will be depression, there will be panic, which will exceed anything known in 1932, for the strongest bank will be in exactly the situation of the weakest bank in 1932. Its major assets will be in collapse. If nature shall be allowed to take its course, suffering will be so great that demand will inevitably arise for a government which will take charge of production and distribution, and the labor of men and women, in order that the masses of the people may be fed and clothed, and the economic mechanism of life may be kept in motion."

A grave and alarming prospect, indeed. It is against this terrible possibility that Wendell Willkie is preaching. He is clanging the danger bell. He realizes the awful danger involved and has pledged himself to do the obvious things, to take the sane and necessary steps that can be taken to avert it.

Mr. Roosevelt gives no heed to this possible fiscal disaster. The Chicago convention platform, which he dictated, studiously refrained from any mention of the public debt. It refrained from any mention of ways and means of taking care of it. It refrained from mentioning these vital matters because it could not offer any sound solution, because, possibly, it did not wish to offer any.

The obvious thing for the people to do is to grasp the only hope of their rescue from this impending destruction by electing Wendell L. Willkie to the presidency and giving him the congressional support he must have to avert it.

Oyster Conservation Need Looms Again

IN SPITE of the mud washed down from the cleared lands, the oyster supply in North American coastal waters has been continuous through the centuries, but "overfishing" the beds has become a common experience in recent years, and now more oysters are shipped to the trade in cans than in the raw state.

This is regarded as an indication that the supply is diminishing and the oysters are failing to develop properly in some of the beds. South Carolina interests began in 1939 to experiment in cultivating. Several oyster farms were started, to enable man to learn how to aid nature in producing more.

Probably no sea food is more favored by man, for nearly everyone likes his oysters stewed, fried, baked or raw; and the months with an "r" in them always draw attention to the season when oysters are obtainable.

Many believe that if a way were found to stop the washing of the soils into the ocean, nature would see to a continuous and plentiful supply of oysters for all needs. But waters still run red to the sea, and this does not increase the chances for oyster growth. Artificial cultivation will doubtless become more and more necessary, and the experiments in South Carolina will be watched with interest.

Legion Chief Sounds A Sensible Warning

RAYMOND J. KELLY, of Detroit, national commander of the American Legion, asserts that there is no more important mission for American citizens than to combat "war hysteria x x x which in the end most likely may lead us into conflict."

Addressing the Boston Advertising Club, shortly after arriving for next week's twenty-second national convention of the Legion, Kelly said "the sound policy for our country is to strengthen our national defenses to the utmost, and as efficiently and expeditiously as possible."

The "virtual conquest of nearly all Europe by a ruthless and superbly organized military machine, has caused a national fear, bordering on panic" in this country within a few months, Kelly stated.

Kelly is dead right about this, and the people will do well to heed his warning. Unfortunately this fear is being inspired, whether consciously or unwittingly one cannot say, even though one may have suspicions, by persons in high places. But even their actions and utterances must be taken with care and calm.

A German newspaper cautions Germans not to associate with foreign folks. This ought to make interesting reading for B. Mussolini and J. Stalin.

The Door-Slammer

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Door-Slammer is one of those fellows who knows exactly what he thinks about everything—but declines to discuss it.

Marshall Maslin

In his presence all exchange of opinion, information or ideas withers away, blighted by the cold breath of his arbitrary judgment.

* * *

Has he read the latest best seller? Yes, he did; it was dull and worthless.

Does he like music? No.

You think the Younger Generation has its good points? . . . Well, he doesn't.

Nice weather we've been having. . . . If we don't have more rain soon the country will dry up and blow away next summer.

Seen any good movies lately? . . . There haven't been any good movies lately.

So-and-So is having a hard time lately. . . . He deserves it.

Very nice symphony concert on the air last Sunday. . . . Never listen to radio music.

Ever play bridge, Mr. Door-Slammer? . . . No, it's a waste of time.

Jim got married last week. . . . Big fool, his wife will probably run him into debt.

Bought a new automobile too. . . . Bigger fool to do that. Old one was good enough.

You don't look so well, Mr. Door-Slammer. Better see a doctor. Do you know a good one? . . . Aren't any good ones. All fakers and quacks. None of them are interested in anything but their fees.

So you go your way, baffled, rebuffed, in retreat. . . . The Door-Slammer has thorns a foot long. If you touch him, he pricks you. Maybe he is a disappointed man. Maybe he's a shy fellow who yearns for human companionship but doesn't know how to achieve it. Maybe he isn't a Door-Slammer at heart at all, but is essentially a Door-Opener who can't keep the door open.

But you have no time to discover the fellow behind the thorns. You have your own life, your own problems. You can go half way, but you can't go all the way, all the time. . . . Poor old Door-Slammer.

Abundant Life Cuts the Income Of the Red Caps

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 18—Mayor La Guardia wants to mobilize the Pullman porters for the New Deal third term. I don't know about the Pullman porters. They are railroad employees. Neither NRA nor its successor labor laws could help them much. Certainly the mayor would have harder sledding with the station porters. Both the red caps and the public are regimented by the Wages-and-Hours administration and they don't like it.

Hugh Johnson

Before the more abundant life came to them, while there was nobody to guarantee their maximum hours and minimum weekly wage and no compulsion on the passengers to pay them ten cents for every package toted, they found the travelling public reasonably generous. A two-bit tip was usual for a real load. Sometimes it was only a dime and sometimes nothing. But these cases were exceptions—usually old ladies and country bankers of the David Harum type.

* * *

Untried Experiment

A compulsory dime for every package carried was an untried experiment. Now the red caps wish it had never been tried even if when the public doesn't collectively pay their minimum wages in full, their employers—the terminal or railroad companies—have to make up the difference.

The boys variously estimate to me that it has reduced their incomes on the average from ten to twenty-five per cent. They would prefer Adam Smith's doctrine of laissez-faire to the Henry Wallace thesis of "regulate everything." They want their rugged individualism restored.

I don't believe the story some of them like to tell about servicing a swanky orchestra when one red cap got a dime for wrestling on a windy day a distance equal to two city blocks with a great bull fiddle, while his mate collected half a buck for carrying three picolos and a couple of flutes. I don't believe it, but it shows what's wrong.

* * *

Must Like It

Formerly, and because he didn't have to, the average passenger with one man-sized grip, willingly gave a quarter for carrying it. Now Uncle Sam tells him that ten cents is enough and that the porter must take it—and like it. He takes it but he doesn't like it, and the average passenger never pauses to give discontent a thought.

Sometimes, as in a recent experience of our First Lady, who left a train with seven parcels, what with the hurry and bustle and this and that, the passenger forgets the new rule and, as in that experience, hands out half a buck and thinks it generous. It used to be, but now the tariff should be seventy cents. The carrier-for-hire relationship has not yet been sufficiently established for these small enterprisers to demand the extra dimes. Just the same, they get debited by the company exactly as though they had been collected.

Fewer Bags

This may also be imagination, but some of the red caps who think they see a tendency to fewer but larger pieces of luggage. If not, why not? It has always seemed to me that, where there are plenty of porters, the European practice of traveling about with a single suitcase harnessed for portage and as big as a Pullman trunk is much more convenient. Couple that with a little toilet case you can carry in your hand and, under this new regimentation, your carrying charges will only be "ten cents, a dime, twice the twentieth part of a dollar"—and all the red caps will get hump-backs and starve to death.

The new system is also inconvenient to both the public and the porters with its red tape, delay of claim checks and receipts. If he wants to corral the station porters' vote, the mayor should get the third term candidate to issue a new emancipation proclamation, or pass the word to Col. Fleming quietly to give the red caps back their freedom before election day.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

A TOUGH OLD OAK

Functioning of Government Bureaus As Courts Agitates Members of Bar

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Those who look beneath the surface of current events in our American life speak of several gigantic struggles which they think they can see in progress. They may not be obvious to the average citizen but they're as plain as a sore thumb to individuals who are affected by them.

Charles P. Stewart

One of these undercover battles raging during the last few years, is between the sort of Yankee judisprudence supported by a majority of members of the American Bar Association and the more totalitarian brand of legal procedure advocated by the lawyers and political leaders who consider themselves the most outstanding apostles of men's rights in general.

The relatively conservative group complains that there's grown up in this country of late an idea for government departments, commissions, bureaus and even individual officials to take upon themselves the functions of our courts. Not only that, but it's asserted that they're doing it, and up to date their rulings have withstood all attempts by those who question them, to get into courts with test cases.

An instance of it, pretty prominently mentioned, is that of a California mail order concern, charged with misrepresenting itself to the public through the utilization of postal facilities in violation of post-office regulations.

In this connection three federal actions were brought against the company. One of them (a legal prosecution of the outfit's president) the government lost, due to an acquittal by a federal court jury. However, Uncle Sam nailed the corporation after its head had been cleared judicially.

A Departmental Ukase

Simultaneously with the accusation against the mail order company's president, the postoffice department has issued a "fraud order" against the company itself.

The company contends that, a federal court having acquitted its president, this "fraud order" should be rescinded, but the department refuses. Vincent N. Miles, its solicitor, takes the position that, since the "mail order business was necessarily discontinued at that time (the time when the order was issued) nothing now is before the department to be considered."

Against the company there also is a case (not yet decided) before the Federal Trade Commission.

It's argued by spokesmen for the present system that such procedure is perfectly proper—in other words, that what might be termed a "ukase" has just as much weight (or more) than any decision from the bench.

It's to upset this theory that the American Bar Association is plugging for reenactment of the Logan-Walter measure, which passed the Senate at the last session of Congress but still is hanging fire in the House of Representatives.

The Bar Association's thesis is that a court test should be made of any decision by a department, bureau, commission or other governmental agency—that a citizen who thinks he is not getting a fair deal from the government, should be allowed to appeal to a judge and that the judge's ruling should be final, unless and until he reverses himself or is reversed by a higher judicial tribunal.

Logan-Walter Bill

It's a fight which has been raging for a number of years.

One of its early leaders was the late Senator M. M. Logan of Kentucky. He and Representative Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, were partner-sponsors of the Logan-Walter bill on the subject. Congressman Walter still is plugging for it.

Many New Dealers don't like it. They think it threatens to hamstring some of the executive agencies that they believe in.

Back of the Logan-Walter bill stretch years of effort by certain members of the American Bar Association. One of the original lawyers to work for such an enactment was Col. O. R. McGuire, formerly associate counsel of the general accounting office in Washington. He and other members of the association found the going rather rough for awhile. It wasn't that their fellow associate members didn't consider them right; they simply didn't want to bother. Now, though, so many of them have had clients who've been hooked that they're interested.

The Wrong Approach

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Senator O'Mahoney's so-called Temporary Economic Committee has submitted a report recommending two possible means of government aid in supplying venture capital to small business firms. One method would be for the government to insure bank loans. The other would set up regional lending corporations financed by the government and private business.

In support of these recommendations, Senator O'Mahoney says that "the principal obstacle to the prosperous development of small business is the difficulty experienced by small business men in securing venture capital with which to finance their operations." Because of the inability of small business men to offer the sort of assets banks find it necessary to require, it was asserted, some means of extending "needed credit" must be found.

There may be some basis in fact for this appraisal of the situation. It would seem to this newspaper, however, that it misses the underlying difficulty entirely, and proposes a palliative instead of a cure. The chief obstacle in the way to expansion of little business is the same one that blocks big business—governmental policy. We suspect that the difficulty is not so much the inability of sound little business to obtain venture capital, as the reluctance of sound little business men to take risks.

Time was in this country when it was possible for a man or group of men to start a business, and by frugality and hard work earn some profits which could be plowed back into the business. Their encouragement was the knowledge that they could go as far as their abilities would carry them; that the government would neither confiscate their earnings, harass them with unreasonable restrictions, or go into competition with them. That was what we called the American system of free enterprise.

Those days are no more. They passed out when the New Deal came in. The system itself is under assault. Everybody knows it, especially those engaged in business.

Guaranteeing loans to business men for expansion will not solve the problem. It will be solved only when we return to the American tradition of free enterprise and fair dealing. Then it will solve itself.

No Man Is Indispensible

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

Who is he? New Dealers identify him as President Roosevelt. They give that as an excuse for nominating him for a third time at Chicago. They offer it as a reason for flouting the third-term tradition and putting the nation in the position of risking dictatorship.

Wendell Willkie says there is no such thing as "the indispensable man." He's right about it, if we apply the term to any single individual. No man is so perfect that his place could not be filled by another.

The only man indispensable to the nation is a composite of all of the men of America—the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, industrialist, doctor, lawyer, newspaper man, day laborer—united in thought and action and dedicated to the task of preserving the democracy under which the United States has marched forward for a century and a half.

No one man is indispensable save in his own egotism.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Robert R. Reynolds, Democrat, of North Carolina

Employes of American institutions, including the American government, are being watched for fear of sabotage. We have to spend the money of the taxpayers of this country to watch aliens, whom American citizens, officials of this government, have hired for service in the government, instead of hiring American citizens. * * * Can you imagine that, Mr. President? Alien enemies, foreigners, non-citizens have been employed in the department of commerce, right here in the capital of our own country. Then the officials who employed them have the gall, the audacity, at this hour to admit that they employed foreigners instead of Americans; and the ridiculous, the revolting, the nauseating thing about their statement is that they have had to hire someone to watch the aliens whom they employed. How much longer are the American people going to stand for such actions?

Garish Clothing At Boys' Schools Held Unharmful

By EDWIN C. HILL

We found a conservative Westchester matron proudly shaken the other day. Her agitation was such that, beginning to share her alarm, we thought she must have picked some new cataclysm from the radio. But it wasn't that. Her disturbance was due to the news that the silk-stocking Connecticut prep school, which her son just entered, has at last lifted the ban on corduroy trousers. Her son's outfit had been prepared and now he was demanding corduroy trousers.

Edwin C. Hill

But that wasn't the worst of it.

* * *

Reason for Bad Manners

"Are there never to be any more gentlemen in the world?" asked the Westchester lady. "For years, this school has firmly refused to allow any of these rowdy styles. They have taught boys how to dress and behave properly and to take their proper place in the world. That was one of the main reasons why we selected it for Herbert. Young people, both boys and girls, are now so shockingly lax in dress, that they seem to have no sense of propriety.

"When a fine old school like this starts giving-in to this disgraceful tendency, there's no end to it. I think that's one reason our children have such bad manners. If they were made to dress properly, they would not be so uncouth."

* * *

Can Play Rough.

The Oratory School of Summit, New Jersey, might well serve as a classic model where they turn out scholarly gentlemen, who, when the occasion arises, can play rough without impairing their good manners.

I was somewhat relieved to learn that it was not the possibility of the British empire falling which so distressed the excellent lady. Her outcry against our decadent times continued far beyond the point indicated and I am afraid I did not follow it all.

I was thinking of Goering, Goebels, and Co., who recently decreed that there would be no more gentlemen in the world—when they took their final sock at it—neither with or without corduroy trousers, and one gathered that any dissenter from their program of world betterment would be lucky if he saved even a pair of dungarees out of the wreck.

* * *

A Lot Huskier

However, I did take a look around at near-by lads getting ready for school. Some of them were a bit gaudy, but the only ones I talked to had nice manners and they seemed a lot huskier than the cubs I remembered, getting ready for boarding school with two-dozen of everything stowed in their new trunk. One could easily imagine them putting up a good rough-and-tumble if any one tried to snatch their corduroy trousers, their bill of rights or whatever it is that they treasure—and such tangibles and intangibles are mixed up more in these days than they ever were before, as we hope to save our shirt and pants along with our liberties.

* * *

Favor Loud Garb

We find that the boys go in for rather loud jackets of gun club check, perhaps with gabardine trousers, blucher shoes and now and then a rather raffish snap-brim hat. That's about the worst of it, and I thought it would be safe to spot the good lady of Westchester a few pairs of corduroys and win the case for the youngsters. We think they're sound in wind and limb and a few notches above fall crops of other years in enterprises and intelligence.

There are some dudes among them, as th always have been, but an exc starch always gets washed ou year or two at an American ge or prep school. I talked to one lad in a pretty garish outfit, who knew more about world affairs than I had ever suspected such a youngster would be capable of. I do not share current alarm about either their pants or their ideas.

* * *

Just Fiddle-Faddle

In a recent issue of Harper's Magazine, E. B. White writes a panegyric to American youth, which I think ought to be manifolded night and day by a thousand printing presses. It is the poetic affirmation of belief by a man "in love with freedom".

"I want to tell something to all the young men and all the young women in all the forty-eight states and in the territory of Alaska," writes Mr. White, "the ones that are cropping up and getting going, looking for the jobs, casting the brand new votes, shining up new guns in old armories, looking for the answers, reading the ads in the papers and listening to the bulletins from London. I want to make an affidavit before the generation that is making America go round—".

Somehow this magnificent affirmation of faith in American youth—read it and you will agree that it is that—and the loyalty it affirms to what we have and what we are, made all this stewing about their coats and pants and grammar and this and that seem just a lot of fiddle-faddle. Any departing Mr. Chips among us may move on with his mind at ease.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The Draft Questionnaire And Our War Status

THOSE who read the reproduction of the questionnaire for the draft published in yesterday's News experienced quite a shock in noting a declaration therein that the nation is at war.

The declaration is contained in paragraph 8 of the instructions applicants are asked to read before filling it out.

"When a notice is posted in the office of your local board affecting you," it reads, "you are bound to perform the duty required even if no notice reaches you by mail. The nation is at war and every registrant is thus put on notice to know his position and duty." (The italics are the News's).

Naturally that statement aroused a lot of pertinent questions: Is the nation at war? Is the administration at Washington assuming that we shall be in war before the drafting is completed and has printed this bald declaration as a means of saving the time and expense of reprinting the questionnaires? Is the Washington government leading us into war?

Those are serious questions, indeed.

There was no explanation accompanying the reproduction of the questionnaire received by the News from one of its syndicate services other than it was a copy of the official blank designed for use under the new conscription bill.

This newspaper is inclined to the opinion that the government has planned to use the same questionnaires that were used in the World war, and that copy of the old form was brought into use without careful editing.

But, it seems rather queer that there should be any lack of care about that.

Care Necessary in Aiding Motor Accident Victims

MOTORISTS who are inexperienced in first aid methods are urged by the Keystone Automobile Club, Maryland, to be extremely careful in the handling of highway accident victims. The caution is urged at the request of hospital authorities.

Well-intentioned motorists, it is pointed out, often aggravate injuries in their laudable, but unskilled, efforts to render assistance.

The best practice, according to medical authorities, is, in the case of broken bones, to make the patient as comfortable as possible at the scene of the accident and await the arrival of doctor or ambulance. In cases of bleeding, the "Good Samaritans" should apply a tourniquet before taking a patient to a hospital.

"The natural impulse of those who are first to reach highway accident victims is to get the patients to a hospital or doctor with utmost haste," said Edward P. Curran, Keystone safety director. "However, the well-intentioned motorist may, by inexperienced handling, change a simple fracture of arm or leg into a more serious injury. In frenzied haste to reach doctor or hospital, improvised ambulances frequently are involved in accidents through disregard of traffic regulations, in some cases causing additional injury or even death to the original victims."

It is important, as Curran says, that utmost care be taken both in the handling of the injured and in transporting them from the scene of accident as lives can be saved and injuries minimized if proper precautions are observed.

A Grave Peril That Faces This Nation

ONE of the things Mr. Willkie is stressing with all the emphasis at his command—and it cannot be too strongly impressed—is the perilous situation faced by the nation as a result of the huge runaway public debt given us by the New Deal administration, and the utter disregard of any plan or effort to check it by giving heed to fiscal affairs on the part of Mr. Roosevelt and his sophoromic advisers.

That peril is real and embodies grave consequences unless something within reason is done about it and done soon.

If this runaway debt is allowed to continue, it will bring the country to the point where government bonds, after the banks are choked with all they can be forced to take, will not be purchased by men at par.

This is no mere academic speculation. History shows that this is the inevitable disastrous result when any government fails to safeguard its own securities or when it issues too many of them.

If the debt is allowed to run away beyond control, it will become unpayable and when that point is reached, the prices of government bonds will collapse, and when that collapse occurs it will be widespread and disastrous. It will be more severe and more destructive than anything this country has ever before experienced by reason of the simple fact that the government debt is now of astronomical proportions.

What will happen when the prices of government bonds collapse? A Baltimore Sun editorial foresees the consequence. "When they collapse," it says, "the value of assets in every bank and insurance company will collapse. There will be depression, there will be panic, which will exceed anything known in 1932, for the strongest bank will be in exactly the situation of the weakest bank in 1932. Its major assets will be in collapse. If nature shall be allowed to take its course, suffering will be so great that demand will inevitably arise for a government which will take charge of production and distribution, and the labor of men and women, in order that the masses of the people may be fed and clothed, and the economic mechanism of life may be kept in motion."

A grave and alarming prospect, indeed. It is against this terrible possibility that Wendell Willkie is preaching. He is clanging the danger bell. He realizes the awful danger involved and has pledged himself to do the obvious things, to take the sane and necessary steps that can be taken to avert it.

Mr. Roosevelt gives no heed to this possible fiscal disaster. The Chicago convention platform, which he dictated, studiously refrained from any mention of the public debt. It refrained from any mention of ways and means of taking care of it. It refrained from mentioning these vital matters because it could not offer any sound solution, because, possibly, it did not wish to offer any.

The obvious thing for the people to do is to grasp the only hope of their rescue from this impending destruction by electing Wendell L. Willkie to the presidency and giving him the congressional support he must have to avert it.

Oyster Conservation Need Looms Again

IN SPITE of the mud washed down from the cleared lands, the oyster supply in North American coastal waters has been continuous through the centuries, but "overfishing" the beds has become a common experience in recent years, and now more oysters are shipped to the trade in cans than in the raw state.

This is regarded as an indication that the supply is diminishing and the oysters are failing to develop properly in some of the beds. South Carolina interests began in 1939 to experiment in cultivating. Several oyster farms were started, to enable man to learn how to aid nature in producing more.

Probably no sea food is more favored by man, for nearly everyone likes his oysters stewed, fried, baked or raw; and the months with an "r" in them always draw attention to the season when oysters are obtainable.

Many believe that if a way were found to stop the washing of the soils into the ocean, nature would see to a continuous and plentiful supply of oysters for all needs. But waters still run red to the sea, and this does not increase the chances for oyster growth. Artificial cultivation will doubtless become more and more necessary, and the experiments in South Carolina will be watched with interest.

Legion Chief Sounds A Sensible Warning

RAYMOND J. KELLY, of Detroit, national commander of the American Legion, asserts that there is no more important mission for American citizens than to combat "war hysteria x x x which in the end most likely may lead us into conflict."

Addressing the Boston Advertising Club, shortly after arriving for next week's twenty-second national convention of the Legion, Kelly said "the sound policy for our country is to strengthen our national defenses to the utmost, and as efficiently and expeditiously as possible."

The "virtual conquest of nearly all Europe by a ruthless and superbly organized military machine, has caused a national fear, bordering on panic" in this country within a few months, Kelly stated.

Kelly is dead right about this, and the people will do well to heed his warning. Unfortunately this fear is being inspired, whether consciously or unwittingly one cannot say, even though one may have suspicions, by persons in high places. But even their actions and utterances must be taken with care and calm.

In this connection three federal actions were brought against the company. One of them (a legal prosecution of the outfit's president) the government lost, due to an acquittal by a federal court jury. However, Uncle Sam nailed the corporation after its head had been cleared judicially.

A Departmental Ukase

Simultaneously with the accusation against the mail order company's president, the postoffice department has issued a "fraud order" against the company itself.

The company contends that, a federal court having acquitted its president, this "fraud order" should be rescinded, but the department refuses. Vincent N. Miles, its solicitor, takes the position that, since the "mail order business was necessarily discontinued at that time (the time when the order was issued) nothing now is before the department to be considered."

Against the company there also is a case (not yet decided) before the Federal Trade Commission.

It's argued by spokesmen for the present system that such procedure is perfectly proper—in other words, that what might be termed a "ukase" has just as much weight (or more) than any decision from the bench.

It's to upset this theory that the American Bar Association is plugging for reenactment of the Logan-Walter measure, which passed the Senate at the last session of Congress but still is hanging fire in the House of Representatives.

The Bar Association's thesis is that a court test should be made of any decision by a department, bureau, commission or other governmental agency—that a citizen who thinks he is not getting a fair deal from the government, should be allowed to appeal to a judge and that the judge's ruling should be final, unless and until he reverses himself or is reversed by a higher judicial tribunal.

Logan-Walter Bill

It's a fight which has been raging for a number of years.

One of its early leaders was the late Senator M. M. Logan of Kentucky. He and Representative Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, were partner-sponsors of the Logan-Walter bill on the subject. Congressman Walter still is plugging for it.

Many New Dealers don't like it. They think it threatens to hamstring some of the executive agencies that they believe in.

Back of the Logan-Walter bill stretch years of effort by certain members of the American Bar Association. One of the original lawyers to work for such an enactment was Col. O. R. McGuire, formerly associate counsel of the general accounting office in Washington. He and other members of the association found the going rather rough for awhile. It wasn't that their fellow associate members didn't consider them right; they simply didn't want to bother. Now, though, so many of them have had clients who've been hooked that they're interested.

The Wrong Approach

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Senator O'Mahoney's so-called Temporary Economic Committee has submitted a report recommending two possible means of government aid in supplying venture capital to small business firms. One method would be for the government to insure bank loans. The other would set up regional lending corporations financed by the government and private business.

In support of these recommendations, Senator O'Mahoney says that "the principal obstacle to the prosperous development of small business is the difficulty experienced by small business men in securing venture capital with which to finance their operations." Because of the inability of small business men to offer the sort of assets banks find it necessary to require, it was asserted, some means of extending "needed credit" must be found.

There may be some basis in fact for this appraisal of the situation. It would seem to this newspaper, however, that it misses the underlying difficulty entirely, and proposes a palliative instead of a cure. The chief obstacle in the way to expansion of little business is the same one that blocks big business—governmental policy. We suspect that the difficulty is not so much the inability of sound little business to obtain venture capital, as the reluctance of sound little business men to take risks.

Time was in this country when it was possible for a man or group of men to start a business, and by frugality and hard work earn some profits which could be plowed back into the business. Their encouragement was the knowledge that they could go as far as their abilities would carry them; that the government would neither confiscate their earnings, harass them with unreasonable restrictions, or go into competition with them. That was what we called the American system of free enterprise.

Those days are no more. They passed out when the New Deal came in. The system itself is under assault. Everybody knows it, especially those engaged in business.

Guaranteeing loans to business men for expansion will not solve the problem. It will be solved only when we return to the American tradition of free enterprise and fair dealing. Then it will solve itself.

No Man Is Indispensible

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

Who is he? New Dealers identify him as President Roosevelt. They give that as an excuse for nominating him for a third time at Chicago. They offer it as a reason for flouting the third-term tradition and putting the nation in the position of risking dictatorship.

Wendell Willkie says there is no such thing as "the indispensable man." He's right about it, if we apply the term to any single individual. No man is so perfect that his place could not be filled by another.

The only man indispensable to the nation is a composite of all of the men of America—the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, industrialist, doctor, lawyer, newspaper man, day laborer—united in thought and action and dedicated to the task of preserving the democracy under which the United States has marched forward for a century and a half.

No one man is indispensable save in his own egotism.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Robert R. Reynolds, Democrat, of North Carolina

Employes of American institutions, including the American government, are being watched for fear of sabotage. We have to spend the money of the taxpayers of this country to watch aliens, whom American citizens, officials of this government, have hired for service in the government, instead of hiring American citizens. * * * Can you imagine that, Mr. President? Alien enemies, foreigners, non-citizens have been employed in the department of commerce, right here in the capital of our own country. Then the officials who employed them have the gall, the audacity, at this hour to admit that they employed foreigners instead of Americans; and the ridiculous, the revolting, the nauseating thing about their statement is that they have had to hire someone to watch the aliens whom they employed. How much longer are the American people going to stand for such actions?

Garish Clothing At Boys' Schools Held Unharmful

Edwin C. Hill

We found a conservative Westchester matron proudly shaken the other day. Her agitation was such that, beginning to share her alarm, we thought she must have picked some new cataclysm from the radio. But it wasn't that. Her disturbance was due to the news that the silk-stocking Connecticut prep school, which her son just entered, has at last lifted the ban on corduroy trousers. Her son's outfit had been prepared and now he was demanding corduroy trousers.

But that wasn't the worst of it.

Reason for Bad Manners

"Are there never to be any more gentlemen in the world?" asked the Westchester lady. "For years, this school has firmly refused to allow any of these rowdy styles. They have taught boys how to dress and behave properly and to take their proper place in the world. That was one of the main reasons why we selected it for Herbert. Young people, both boys and girls, are now so shockingly lax in dress, that they seem to have no sense of propriety.

"When a fine old school like this starts giving-in to this disgraceful tendency, there's no end to it. I think that's one reason our children have such bad manners. If they were made to dress properly, they would not be so uncouth."

* * *

Can Play Rough.

The Oratory School of Summit, New Jersey, might well serve as a classic model where they turn out scholarly gentlemen, who, when the occasion arises, can play rough without impairing their good manners.

I was somewhat relieved to learn that it was not the possibility of the British empire falling which so distressed the excellent lady. Her outcry against our decadent times continued far beyond the point indicated and I am afraid I did not follow it all.

I was thinking of Goering, Goebels, and Co., who recently decreed that there would be no more gentlemen in the world—when they took their final sock at it—neither with or without corduroy trousers, and one gathered that any dissenter from their program of world betterment would be lucky if he saved even a pair of dungarees out of the wreck.

* * *

A Lot Huskier

However, I did take a look around at near-by lads getting ready for school. Some of them were a bit gaudy, but the only ones I talked to had nice manners and they seemed a lot huskier than the cubs I remembered, getting ready for boarding school with two-dozen of everything stowed in their new trunk. One could easily imagine them putting up a good rough-and-tumble if any one tried to snatch their corduroy trousers, their bill of rights or whatever it is that they treasure—and such tangibles and intangibles are mixed up more in these days than they ever were before, as we hope to save our shirt and pants along with our liberties.

* * *

Favor Loud Garb

We find that the boys go in for rather loud jackets of gun club check, perhaps with gabardine trousers, blucher shoes and now and then a rather raffish snap-brim hat. That's about the worst of it, and I thought it would be safe to spot the good lady of Westchester a few pairs of corduroys and win the case for the youngsters. We think they're sound in wind and limb and a few notches above fall crops of other years in enterprises and intelligence.

There are some dudes among them, as th always have been, but an exc starch always gets washed ou year or two at an American ge or prep school. I talked to one lad in a pretty garish outfit, who knew more about world affairs than I had ever suspected such a youngster would be capable of. I do not share current alarm about either their pants or their ideas.

* * *

Just Fiddle-Faddle

In a recent issue of Harper's Magazine, E. B. White writes a panegyric to American youth, which I think ought to be manifolded night and day by a thousand printing presses. It is the poetic affirmation of belief by a man "in love with freedom".

"I want to tell something to all the young men and all the young women in all the forty-eight states and in the territory of Alaska," writes Mr. White, "the ones that are cropping up and getting going, looking for the jobs, casting the brand new votes, shining up new guns in old armories, looking for the answers, reading the ads in the papers and listening to the bulletins from London. I want to make an affidavit before the generation that is making America go round—".

Somehow this magnificent affirmation of faith in American youth—read it and you will agree that it is that—and the loyalty it affirms to what we have and what we are, made all this stewing about their coats and pants and grammar and this and that seem just a lot of fiddle-faddle. Any departing Mr. Chips among us may move on with his mind at east.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

JOY OF LIVING

Two People Who Have Never Met but Want To, and the Big City and What It Did for Them Both

By MAUREEN DALY

It was such a big city. Sometimes she wondered if she'd ever meet anyone. Sometimes, between customers, she'd lean her elbows on the cash register and dream about how nice it would be to know someone who cared about books and small houses and vegetable gardens in the back yard and big fields of green grass.

It was a candy shop she worked in, a long, cool place with blue-gray walls and rose-colored indirect lighting high up near the ceiling. Near the cash register was a big blue pottery bowl of pink poppies. The store was on a corner and on two sides were huge plate glass windows with rose-tinted venetian blinds which were always drawn to keep the sun off the expensive candies.

She wondered how often he passed by.

Sometimes she would try to imagine what it would be like to have someone outside waiting for her when the store closed at 6. Someone who would say, "Let's buy some sandwiches and have our supper in the park," or "Let's drive out and walk along the beach tonight." Sometimes she wished the venetian blinds weren't always drawn tight so then she could watch the people hurry by. Once in the fall when a customer opened the shaded door she caught a glimpse of a tall, lean young man in a rough tweed suit going by. He looked in for a moment and she noticed that he had a piece of goldenrod in his buttonhole. She wondered how often he passed by this way, but she never saw him again.

He worked in the adjustments department of a sporting goods company. Each Sunday in the summer he took his swimming trunks and rode the streetcar to the beach. All day he lay on the sand with little children digging holes and building castles close around him and long-legged girls jumping over him playing tag. He'd lie with his eyes closed and his head on his arms and wish he were on a small quiet beach with a small quiet girl who had packed a large lunch in a wicker basket covered with a white napkin and who would like to sit with him and listen to the soft lapping of the summer waves.

Usually on Sundays she washed her hair and mended her clothes and maybe opened a can of soup for lunch. Then she'd curl up on the studio couch and read. She preferred rental library books with pale colored paper covers that told about the struggle of a poor young lawyer in a small town or of the trials of a new bride — anything comforting and homey. Anything that didn't remind her of the loneliness of the city. About every third week end she went out for dinner and a movie with a candy agent who came to the shop twice a month. He was short and stocky and always wore bright ties with an up and down stripe. Usually they went to a small Hungarian restaurant with dim lights and a noisy native orchestra. The room was always smoke blue and they ate rich, warm food and then she always fell asleep in the movie afterward. The candy agent liked her and gave her a bracelet on Valentine's Day, but when she asked him to go for a walk in the park he said, "What, and freeze my toes off? Don't be silly." So she knew he would never do.

The man in the tweed suit rushed by the store with the drawn blinds every day at five to nine and then again at 10 to five in the afternoon just in time to catch his streetcar. Sometimes he wondered what it was like inside and even thought of stopping there for candy for his mother for Mother's Day and then at the last minute decided to send roses. He didn't care much for girls and the fellows at the office were always trying to fix him up with friends of their girl friends like that blonde, but he never had much fun.

It was one Saturday night near the end of August. The moon hung low, and the night air was soft. She lay on the studio couch in her room with the windows open wide and watched the moon. He went out for a couple of beers with the boys and then walked down to the river by himself and sat and watched for hours while the moonlight licked gold on the ripples. She knew then that something had to happen; she had to make things change. She couldn't go on forever being lonely and wishing for a little house and storybook happiness. She was letting her life slip by.

He sat by the river thinking. If the other fellows at the office could get a kick out of living he could too. All he needed was someone to keep him from getting lonely and always wanting things he couldn't find in the city. He made up his mind that now was the time to make a change.

And the next day was the third Sunday of the month and instead of going to the stuffy little Hungarian restaurant she and the candy agent, whom she knew very well by now but loved very little, drove down to Dubuque and were married. The man in the tweed suit called up the blonde, took her out and let her do the talking. Pretty soon he forgot all about home cooking and comfortable slippers after work and had dated the blonde up for every night the next week.

On Monday morning the candy agent's new wife was out looking for a two-room apartment—something not too near the L and with a window box for growing flowers. On Monday morning at five minutes to 9 the young man in the tweed suit dashed by the candy shop with a pounding headache and a bad taste in his mouth. He made a mental note to stop in and buy a box of candy for the blonde before he met her for dinner tonight.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Bergdoll Must Serve Seven Year Sentence

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World war draft dodger, lost today an appeal to federal court, which ruled he must serve the full seven-year sentence imposed by an army court martial.

A five-year term was imposed in 1920 after his capture as a deserter, and a two-year sentence was added last year after his return from Germany whence he fled after his first trial.

Judge John C. Knox, in dismissing a writ of habeas corpus, denied Bergdoll's contention that he was entitled to the leniency of a 1916 peace-time order of president Wilson limiting punishment for desertion to eighteen months if the deserter had been in service less than six months.

Last fall, Frank Murphy, then attorney general, ordered the return to Bergdoll of property appraised at slightly more than $300,000. The appraised value of Bergdoll's property held by the attorney general was $535,540, but $200,000 was set aside for income taxes that might be owed.

Minister Arrested For Violation of Marriage Law

ELKTON, Md., Sept. 18 (AP)—State's Attorney E. D. E. Rollins said today the Cecil County Circuit Court grand jury had indicted the Rev. Joseph Baker of Elkton on a charge of violating Maryland's 48 hour marriage license law.

He said Sheriff David Randolph and deputy Sheriff Ralph Robinson testified before the jury that Mr. Baker had married a couple after a license application was issued to them, but before they received a license.

Mr. Baker was arrested by the two officers about a month ago. He was released under $500 bail after spending a night in jail.

The jury's true bill was returned this afternoon Rollins said. Mr Baker is represented by Henry A Warburton, attorney.

The law requires a 48-hour wait between application for and issuance of a license became effective in Maryland Dec. 9, 1938. Before that, Elkton was famous as a "Gretna Green."

The grand jury started deliberations today with Judges J. Owen Knotts, Thomas J. Keating, and James F. Evans on the bench.

ELKTON, Md., Sept. 18 (AP)—State's Attorney E. D. E. Rollins said today the Cecil County Circuit Court grand jury had indicted the Rev. Joseph Baker of Elkton on a charge of violating Maryland's 48 hour marriage license law.

He said Sheriff David Randolph and deputy Sheriff Ralph Robinson testified before the jury that Mr Baker had married a couple after a license application was issued to them, but before they received a license.

Mr. Baker was arrested by the two officers about a month ago. He was released under $500 bail after spending a night in jail.

The jury's true bill was returned this afternoon Rollins said. Mr Baker is represented by Henry A Warburton, attorney.

The law requires a 48-hour wait between application for and issuance of a license became effective in Maryland Dec. 9, 1938. Before that, Elkton was famous as a "Gretna Green."

The grand jury started deliberations today with Judges J. Owen Knotts, Thomas J. Keating, and James F. Evans on the bench.

There's No Law Against Sparkle In Fashions for the Mature Woman

AP Feature Service

By AMY PORTER

AP Feature Service Writer

Fashion ad writers always are at a loss in referring to the woman of 45 and over who wears size 16-plus.

The term "stylish stout" is definitely out. "Older woman" won't do. Sometimes she's called "the young in heart," "impressive, dignified," "the woman of affairs." Or perhaps "frankly 40," which means of course that she's a good deal more than 40.

Salesgirls probably have the best solution to the problem. They speak of "mama styles." And why not? Many mature women are mamas, and proud of it.

So let's stop worrying about tact and instead consider the older woman's clothes problem.

Actually, a red hat usually is flattering to the woman whose hair is entirely gray or white.

It isn't much of a problem to find a properly cut dress or suit. Designers have learned to broaden shoulders so that waist and hip are minimized. They know how to use folds and drapery to flatter the mature figure.

Hats, which used to be such a problem, are well taken care of by such designers as Germaine Montabert, who specializes in those becoming to older women.

Hats Designed By Germaine Montabert

Here's elegance for the mature woman. A softly shirred satin dress, a silver fox scarf and a hat of hunter's green felt. The natural coque feather trim is arranged in a tri-wing effect. Dress and hat both are especially designed for the woman past 40.

The mature women is likely to overlook need for a focal point in her outfit—perhaps a silver fox scarf or a red purse to match the red feather in her hat—to give her drama and sparkle, and prove she's on her toes in a lively world.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Chivalrous Gesture

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Three years ago I married a girl, whom I had gone with years previously. She is the only child of fairly well-to-do people while I am of a poor family. For two years we lived to ourselves and were quite happy. Then my work forced me to travel.

My wife became restless due to my absence and the idea that she wasn't getting enough fun out of marriage. So she left me saying she didn't care for me any longer. I think her parents interfered, and also that she didn't like the idea of having to do without certain things. She has no grounds for divorce, so I thought I'd get the divorce. I still want her, but my action will be just to satisfy her, as she says she doesn't want me. Am I doing right?

I feel quite confident that I could marry again, but would it be fair to the girl I would ask, knowing that I will always fele the same toward my wife? Do you suppose that after a period of playing, seeing other men as they are, my wife would want to come back?

I will always think she really cares for me. W.

Feeling the way you do about your wife, and having the impression she still cares for you, don't you think it would be foolish to get a divorce only to give her more freedom? Men have made this sort of chivalrous gesture, even submitting to trumped up charges so that their wives would divorce them and enjoy more good times. But as you think her parents have influenced her in this matter, and she may be bored living under the parental roof at least give her a chance to make up her mind.

No C. C. C. Camp for Girls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I would like to join a C. C. C. camp for girls and would like to know where I can register or make application for entrance.

T. A.

Unfortunately there are no camps for girls, run on the same lines as the C. C. C. for boys. You might inquire of the Y. W. C. A. if they know of any camps for girls, where the price is nominal.

Disliked Him, Now Misses Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Some time ago I met a young man whom I didn't like then, and now that I haven't seen or heard from him for a month, I miss him a great deal. And I must admit I really like him a lot and I've heard that he likes me too. He once asked me to go "steady," but I told him I didn't care for him.

Would it be proper for me to arrange a small gathering of some hind, invite him, or do you think that would show my feelings too much?

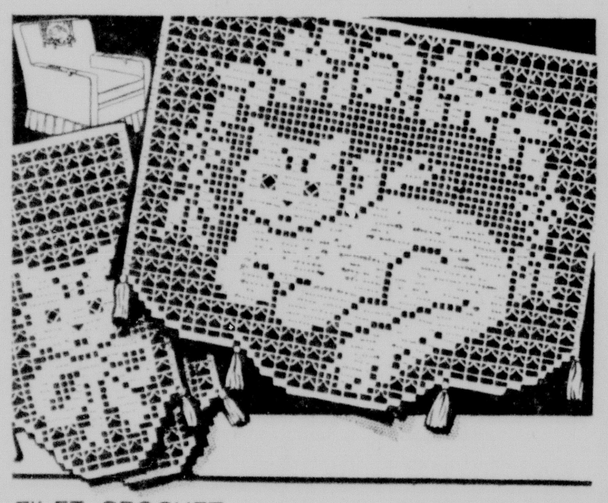

C.

It would not only be proper but very nice for you to arrange a little party and invite the friend. If you would like it, I will be glad to send you a leaflet on out-of-door parties for summer and autumn. Just enclose a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope in your letter to me, and I'll take care of your request immediately.

There's No Law Against Sparkle In Fashions for the Mature Woman

AP Feature Service

By AMY PORTER

AP Feature Service Writer

Fashion ad writers always are at a loss in referring to the woman of 45 and over who wears size 16-plus.

The term "stylish stout" is definitely out. "Older woman" won't do. Sometimes she's called "the young in heart," "impressive, dignified," "the woman of affairs." Or perhaps "frankly 40," which means of course that she's a good deal more than 40.

Salesgirls probably have the best solution to the problem. They speak of "mama styles." And why not? Many mature women are mamas, and proud of it.

So let's stop worrying about tact and instead consider the older woman's clothes problem.

Actually, a red hat usually is flattering to the woman whose hair is entirely gray or white.

It isn't much of a problem to find a properly cut dress or suit. Designers have learned to broaden shoulders so that waist and hip are minimized. They know how to use folds and drapery to flatter the mature figure.

Hats, which used to be such a problem, are well taken care of by such designers as Germaine Montabert, who specializes in those becoming to older women.

Hats Designed By Germaine Montabert

Here's elegance for the mature woman. A softly shirred satin dress, a silver fox scarf and a hat of hunter's green felt. The natural coque feather trim is arranged in a tri-wing effect. Dress and hat both are especially designed for the woman past 40.

The mature women is likely to overlook need for a focal point in her outfit—perhaps a silver fox scarf or a red purse to match the red feather in her hat—to give her drama and sparkle, and prove she's on her toes in a lively world.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Chivalrous Gesture

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Three years ago I married a girl, whom I had gone with years previously. She is the only child of fairly well-to-do people while I am of a poor family. For two years we lived to ourselves and were quite happy. Then my work forced me to travel.

My wife became restless due to my absence and the idea that she wasn't getting enough fun out of marriage. So she left me saying she didn't care for me any longer. I think her parents interfered, and also that she didn't like the idea of having to do without certain things. She has no grounds for divorce, so I thought I'd get the divorce. I still want her, but my action will be just to satisfy her, as she says she doesn't want me. Am I doing right?

I feel quite confident that I could marry again, but would it be fair to the girl I would ask, knowing that I will always fele the same toward my wife? Do you suppose that after a period of playing, seeing other men as they are, my wife would want to come back?

I will always think she really cares for me. W.

Feeling the way you do about your wife, and having the impression she still cares for you, don't you think it would be foolish to get a divorce only to give her more freedom? Men have made this sort of chivalrous gesture, even submitting to trumped up charges so that their wives would divorce them and enjoy more good times. But as you think her parents have influenced her in this matter, and she may be bored living under the parental roof at least give her a chance to make up her mind.

No C. C. C. Camp for Girls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I would like to join a C. C. C. camp for girls and would like to know where I can register or make application for entrance.

T. A.

Unfortunately there are no camps for girls, run on the same lines as the C. C. C. for boys. You might inquire of the Y. W. C. A. if they know of any camps for girls, where the price is nominal.

Disliked Him, Now Misses Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Some time ago I met a young man whom I didn't like then, and now that I haven't seen or heard from him for a month, I miss him a great deal. And I must admit I really like him a lot and I've heard that he likes me too. He once asked me to go "steady," but I told him I didn't care for him.

Would it be proper for me to arrange a small gathering of some hind, invite him, or do you think that would show my feelings too much?

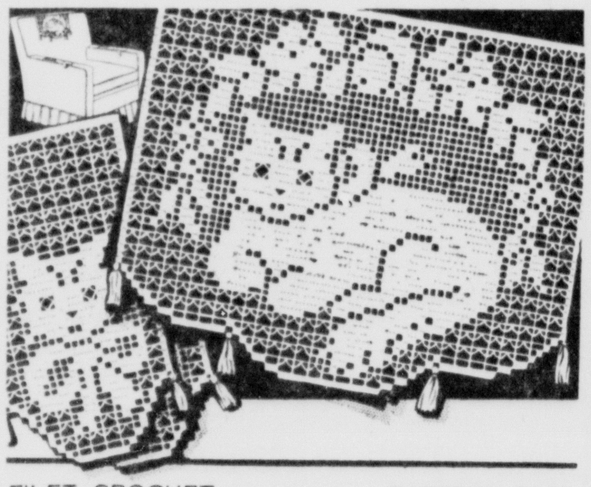

C.

It would not only be proper but very nice for you to arrange a little party and invite the friend. If you would like it, I will be glad to send you a leaflet on out-of-door parties for summer and autumn. Just enclose a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope in your letter to me, and I'll take care of your request immediately.

Family Pets Are Entitled To Love And Care, Noted Lecturer Declares

BY GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Kindness of dumb animals, seems to go along with kindness and consideration for people. On the contrary, harshness and cruelty to dumb animals appear to spring from a hard and inconsiderate human heart. Such was the conclusion I arrived at when a boy on the farm, from the observations of the farm folk among whom I grew up. Such is my opinion still, shared I think, by most who read this column. Therefore, we parents believe we should be kind to pets and other domestic animals, even to the creatures of the wild.

Value of Pets

Pets are good means through which we may cultivate in the growing child a wholesome attitude toward the lower animals. All too often the child is allowed to be cruel to a pet, in which case he is morally harmed. Don't let the tot torment the dog or cat or torture any other pet.

If you spend sufficient time and patience you will be able to train a child in tenderness and kindness toward a pet, almost solely by suggestion. Most parents, however, in order to succeed, will find it necessary to give the little child bodily pain to prevent it from habitual annoyance and injury of the pet. Unless this child learns in some way to be kind to the lowly creature, it is not fair to it nor wholesome for the moral character of the child to keep this pet. Train the child or get rid of the pet.

Children On Farm

There is the problem among children on the farm of educating them not to throw things at the farm animals, the fowls or wild birds.

As I look back, I feel grateful for the way my parents taught me to be kind to farm animals, though I regret I did not always respond as I should to their wise instruction. Not always did I willingly walk up a steep hill instead of riding on the load drawn by the faithful horses. Sometimes I hurried these willing brutes drawing the plow, mower or reaper on a hot day; nor was I always quite so conscientious about blanketing the horses on cold and wintry days as I should have been. Yet, as I grew older, I have grown in a kinder attitude toward dumb animals since, thanks chiefly, I think, to the patient and continuous teaching of by parents during my childhood.

Waning Novelty

After the average child over six of eilght clamoring for a pet receives one, his willing and faithful care of it soon wanes and he will neglect it, if allowed. Thereafter the pet may become a burden to the mother and a source of family irritation.

The wise parent will aim to cultivate in this child responsibility for the pet's care. If all persuasive measures fail, it may be well to let the child go without a meal for each time he fails to feed his pet.

Made a Mistake, Man Who Tried To Kidnap Kaiser Says

MONTREAL, Sept. 18 (AP)—Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers Baseball Club who was one of a group of American soldiers that tried to kidnap the German Kaiser at the close of the World war, told a service club luncheon today:

"It would have been better if, instead of trying to kidnep the Kaiser, we had cut a corporal's throat."

Defeat of Tax Exemption Plan Urged in Senate

"Shocking Political Consequences" Predicted If Rider Passes

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—Forecasting "shocking political consequences" Senators Austin (R-Vt) and Burke (D-Neb) have urged the Senate to defeat a pending proposal to end all tax exemptions on governmental securities, federal, state, and local.

The senators protested that a rider offered by Senator Brown (D-Mich) as an amendment to the excess profits tax bill "would subordinate the states to an all powerful central government." Their views were expressed in a minority report they filed as members of a Special Senate committee appointed to investigate tax exemptions.

Senator Brown, as chairman, offered the proposed rider for a majority of this Special committee, including Senators Byrd (D-Va) Miller (D-Ark) and Townsend (R-Del). The committee study followed a 1938 message from President Roosevelt urging Congress to remove these tax exemptions.

Brown told the Senate that the rider would enable the federal government to tax income from future state and local bonds and vice versa.

Austin and Burke insisted that the proposal was "economically unsound" as well as unconstitutional. If all government securities were taxed, they said, states and municipalities would have to pay at least $113,000,000 a year more on their securities, and the tax load on their residents would increase. They added that few states would realize any sizeable sum from taxes on federal bonds.

The Brown amendment will be the pending Senate business when it resumes debate on the excess profits tax measure tomorrow after the recess in respect to the late Speaker Bankhead (D-Ala) of the House

Game Is Scarce in Frederick County

FREDERICK, Md., Sept. 18 (AP)—A small army of hunters stalked squirrels through Frederick county woods today, despite a report from District Game Warden Benjamin Phebus that the game was 'far from abundant.'

Phebus said he had seen but few squirrel in the county woods in recent days.

Optimism gripped the hunters, however, and 400 took out licenses Saturday at the office of clerk of the Court Ellis C. Wachter.

Money found in letters sent to the dead letter office, is turned over to the treasury department as miscellaneous receipts.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Federal Investigators To Probe Primary In New Mexico

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept 18 (AP) — Two federal investigations were projected into New Mexico's Democratic senatorial contest tonight as charges came from the rival camps of Senator Dennis Chavez and Rep. J. J. Dempsey.

On the basis of virtually complete unofficial returns from Saturday's elections, Senate Chavez appeared to have been renominated by about 2,500 ballots out of a total Democratic vote expected to approximate 95,000 to 100,000.

With agents of the Department of Justice reported already in the state by Dempsey, Chairman Gillette (D-Ia) said in Washington today the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee "probably would send an investigator to New Mexico" in connection with the Dempsey-Chavez battle.

Native-born Chavez, apparently aiming at Dempsey's recent New York city origin, issued a statement declaring "the day of bosses is over in New Mexico—so is vote-buying and carpet-bagging."

Dempsey said in Sante Fe "we're going to break this gang up. New Mexico political bosses do not seem to realize the Hatch Act is in effect. The people have been intimidated."

head of the Commission's Industrial Materials division.

Stettinius's talk will be broadcast at 9:15 over CBS. Subsequent broadcasts will be divided among all three major networks.

Special for Laughton

MBS brings Charles Laughton to the air in a special In Chicago Tonight production. The stage and screen top-notcher has top billing in "Ode to Chicago," a dramatic tribute to pioneers of the Windy City. The show will originate from WGN, Chicago, at 7:30.

Parks Johnson used to be in the army; now he's a radio star. Ray Perkins used to be a radio star but he's in the army now. The boys meet up at 6:30 p. m. (CBS) when Johnson and Wally Butterworth take Vox Pop to Governor's Island, N. Y., where Perkins is on duty as public relations officer.

College Satire

Walter O'Keefe is the coach in a college satire on Rudy Vallee's show at 9 on WEAF-NBC.

Sylvia Marlowe, pinch-hitting for Yella Pessl on CBS' harpsichord, plays some ancient "swing" at 2:35.

The Navy School of Music band opens concert series at 11:15 a. m.

Jokester sent Horace Heidt's band a fan letter saying "I believe you boys are on the way up."

John B. Kennedy is to start a five-a-week news broadcast for auto sponsor.

Federal Investigators To Probe Primary In New Mexico

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept 18 (AP) — Two federal investigations were projected into New Mexico's Democratic senatorial contest tonight as charges came from the rival camps of Senator Dennis Chavez and Rep. J. J. Dempsey.

On the basis of virtually complete unofficial returns from Saturday's elections, Senate Chavez appeared to have been renominated by about 2,500 ballots out of a total Democratic vote expected to approximate 95,000 to 100,000.

With agents of the Department of Justice reported already in the state by Dempsey, Chairman Gillette (D-Ia) said in Washington today the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee "probably would send an investigator to New Mexico" in connection with the Dempsey-Chavez battle.

Native-born Chavez, apparently aiming at Dempsey's recent New York city origin, issued a statement declaring "the day of bosses is over in New Mexico—so is vote-buying and carpet-bagging."

Dempsey said in Sante Fe "we're going to break this gang up. New Mexico political bosses do not seem to realize the Hatch Act is in effect. The people have been intimidated."

Electric RANGES are SAFE • ACCURATE

The knowledge that inquiring young fingers can cause no more harm than the waste of a little electricity is an endless comfort to every mother.

Equally important is the assurance that every meal will be cooked exactly as it should be—that vital elements will be retained in foods to nourish and build healthy bodies.

These are always the things which parents place first among the many desirable features of Electric Cookery. You too can make your home safer and more healthful with an Electric Range.

Deafness Is Discussed by Noted Doctor

Commonest Cause among Children is from Infection of Throat

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

From the viewpoint of function the organ of hearing consists of two parts:

First, the sound-conducting part. This consists of the external ear, the ear drum and middle ear, and part of the internal ear. Second, the sound-perceiving part which consists of the organ of Corti in the cochlear bone of the internal ear where the end fibers of the auditory nerve are spread out in a spiral shape so that each one, like the individual pipes of an organ, responds to a single note. Then the auditory nerve and the sound perceiving areas of the brain.

The auditory nerve and the auditory areas of the brain are almost never involved in a case of deafness.

Congenital Deafness

Congenital deafness involves almost always the organ of Corti. This may be due to the absence of the nerve fibers or maldevelopment so that there is no perception apparatus to call into play. Malformation of the bone in which the organ of Corti is placed will do the same thing. In children with absence of the thyroid gland — cretinism — the inner ear spaces are filled with a heavy (myxomatous) material.

Most cases of deafness in children are of the conduction type due to inflammation of the middle ear. The commonest cause of such inflammation is from infection in the throat, most often an infected adenoid that lies over the end of the Eustachian tube. The Eustachian tube goes from the throat to the middle ear.

Any of the infectious diseases of childhood may leave an infection in the middle ear as a residue or sequel—measles, scarlet fever, influenza and meningitis are particularly dangerous in this respect; whooping cough less so.

The canal of the external ear can be affected so as to cause deafness in childhood. Boils or plugs of wax are the commonest forms of such obstruction.

In the care and prevention of deafness in childhood much can be done. Every discharging ear should have careful and adequate treatment. During and after one of the infectious diseases, daily inspection of the ear drum should be made, and early incision instituted if pus forms.

Vitamin D

The deafness should also be assessed by means of functional tests. For school and educational purposes defective hearing should be recognized early, and special attention given to a child so handicapped—by having the child sit in the front seat in the class or provided with an electric hearing device. I emphasize this apparently obvious step because too often small degrees of deafness are not recognized in children, and the child's backwardness in class is laid to stupidity.

If the existent deafness appears to be progressive, every possible focus of infection should be eradicated and the cleaning out of all infected tags of adenoids instituted. Elimination and diet, especially the intake of Vitamin D, should be supervised.

Roosevelt said last year that Argentine beef is superior to American beef. His bull, however, is superior to all.

Gold Rush Baltimore Style

BALTIMORE (AP)—A crew of building wreckers, clearing a federal housing project site, started a "gold rush."

One workman uncovered a mortar stained $1 bill in a pile of bricks that were once negro slum homes.

A truck driver, who deserted his vehicle for more profitable enterprise, says he found $127.

A pitman was seen to pick up a roll of bills and stuff them in his pocket. He went to lunch a few minutes later, and never did return to work.

Due to the heavy reservations another coach has been added to the Miller World's Fair Tour party. Reservations are now available. Tour leaves Friday night, Sept. 20.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

June D. Livingston vs. James P. Livingston.

No. 15,819 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant, a vinculo matrimonii. The bill states that the parties were married in Cumberland, Maryland, on October 9, 1936; that they lived together as husband and wife from April, 1937, to May 5, 1937, when the defendant abandoned and deserted the plaintiff and declared his intention to live with her no longer and that said abandonment has continued uninterruptedly from that time down to the present time and is deliberate and final and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable hope of a reconciliation; that no children have been born to the parties to this marriage; that the plaintiff is a resident of the State of Maryland, Allegany County, though temporarily in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, and has been such a resident of the State of Maryland for more than two years last passed; that the defendant is a resident of the State of South Carolina and a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon this 17th day of September, 1940, ordered by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, that the plaintiff, by causing this order to be inserted in some certain newspaper published in Allegany County, once a week for four successive weeks, before the 20th day of October, 1940, giving notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill and warning him to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 5th day of November, 1940, to show cause, if any he have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

COLLEGE GIRLS SHOP FOR SMART, WEARABLE CLOTHES

When the college girls go shopping for their school wardrobes they look for smart things, of course, to make them feel well dressed among their mates, but they also want garments that are wearable—keep their style and wear well. The American opossum coat in 32-inch length, left, can be used for sports or double for evening. It is worn with a black wool dress and black beaver and felt hat. The draped waistline is shown in the dress in center. It has a brown jersey top with gold, brown, red and green plaid skirt, and fits high at the throat. The third model is a "date" dress of black faille bengaline, with panel front and collar and cuffs in same material in white.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Distributed by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Irked By Family Birthdays

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very fond of this girl. In fact I'm on the point of asking her to marry me. I don't think I'm a tightwad, but I'm tired of her custom of wanting to include her whole family in everything.

Birthdays are what are bothering me now. She's the oldest of several children, and she never fails to tell me the day, if not the exact minute, each one of them was born. And of course it calls for a gift.

At first I thought it was grand to be the Big Man, but now I hate the very sight of these youngsters, fearing they will spring another birthday on me. They are all very lovely children, but I'm getting sick and tired of it. Do you think I ought to quit going with her?

GETTING COOLER.

Well, Mr. Cooler, I wonder if you're not partly to blame yourself? When you first met these "little angels" did you make a big fuss over them, thus giving them a false idea of your interest? What about the girl? Are you getting cool about her? If not, I think you can manage the "kids."

* * *

May Jilt Her, Too

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I secretaely admired a certain young man for a long time, when all of a sudden he asked me for a date. Although I knew he was engaged to another girl I thought we might be good pals, so I went out with him. But after several dates, I find I'm in love with him, and he's on the verge of falling in love with me.

What should I do, Miss Fairfax? I love him very much, and it's only natural that I want to keep him. However, what if he treats me the way he treated the girl he was engaged to when he started going with me? He might meet still another girl and fall in love with her and drop me. I'm all mixed up.

WONDERING.

A generation or two ago, young people went grimly through with their promises, even when they had learned to care for someone else. Today they're more sensible and do not marry, even when engaged, if their affections have strayed elsewhere.

Inasmuch as this young man seems willing to take up with one girl when engaged to another, it might be just as well for both of you to go slowly until you discover whether or not your love for each other is real.

Widower Wants To Remarry

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wife died about two years ago and I am very lonely. I have two children, and we have a lovely home. My girl is 20 years old and is employed, while the boy is 12. This, you will see, leaves the boy home alone all day until we come home from our respective ofices. Consequently he doesn't get the right kind of meals, and really needs the attention only a woman can give him.

I have been thinking that I'd like to marry again, and there are a couple of widows among my friends whom I am considering. Both of them have children, which makes me hesitate as they might not get along with my boy.

Have you any suggestions? Do you think it advisable to marry a woman with or without children?

M. R.

As I have often written in this column, the best way to meet new friends is through those you already have. In your place I'd suggest that you make it known among your men acquaintances, who are employed in the same place of business as you are, that you would be glad to meet some women who would make a good mother for your little boy.

Have you thought of asking your pastor, who knows you, to acquaint you with a suitable woman?

Local Woman Is Robbed of $30 While Asleep

Alberta Hawthorne, a waitress at Porter's restaurant, has reported to police that approximately $30 was stolen from her purse as she slept while enroute to Cumberland from Frederick via bus.

The young woman said a man, about 25 years of age and wearing dark clothing, sat beside her until the bus reached Hancock about 8:15 p. m., where he got off. He was traveling from Washington to Hancock to visit his family she said he told her.

"I slept on the bus and it would have been an easy matter for him to lift the money from my purse," she added. She discovered the money missing when she arrived home.

Police immediately put out a pickup for the man.

Irked By Family Birthdays

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very fond of this girl. In fact I'm on the point of asking her to marry me. I don't think I'm a tightwad, but I'm tired of her custom of wanting to include her whole family in everything.

Birthdays are what are bothering me now. She's the oldest of several children, and she never fails to tell me the day, if not the exact minute, each one of them was born. And of course it calls for a gift.

At first I thought it was grand to be the Big Man, but now I hate the very sight of these youngsters, fearing they will spring another birthday on me. They are all very lovely children, but I'm getting sick and tired of it. Do you think I ought to quit going with her?

GETTING COOLER.

Well, Mr. Cooler, I wonder if you're not partly to blame yourself? When you first met these "little angels" did you make a big fuss over them, thus giving them a false idea of your interest? What about the girl? Are you getting cool about her? If not, I think you can manage the "kids."

May Jilt Her, Too

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I secretaely admired a certain young man for a long time, when all of a sudden he asked me for a date. Although I knew he was engaged to another girl I thought we might be good pals, so I went out with him. But after several dates, I find I'm in love with him, and he's on the verge of falling in love with me.

What should I do, Miss Fairfax? I love him very much, and it's only natural that I want to keep him. However, what if he treats me the way he treated the girl he was engaged to when he started going with me? He might meet still another girl and fall in love with her and drop me. I'm all mixed up.

WONDERING.

A generation or two ago, young people went grimly through with their promises, even when they had learned to care for someone else. Today they're more sensible and do not marry, even when engaged, if their affections have strayed elsewhere.

Inasmuch as this young man seems willing to take up with one girl when engaged to another, it might be just as well for both of you to go slowly until you discover whether or not your love for each other is real.

When the college girls go shopping for their school wardrobes they look for smart things, of course, to make them feel well dressed among their mates, but they also want garments that are wearable—keep their style and wear well. The American opossum coat in 32-inch length, left, can be used for sports or double for evening. It is worn with a black wool dress and black beaver and felt hat. The draped waistline is shown in the dress in center. It has a brown jersey top with gold, brown, red and green plaid skirt, and fits high at the throat. The third model is a "date" dress of black faille bengaline, with panel front and collar and cuffs in same material in white.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

"OUR JOBS seldom are easy," X reminded Charles Cazelton.

"I suppose not. Oh, yes, there's one other thing. I believe I've been spotted—or, at any rate, am an object of suspicion."

"Indeed? That's a pity. But what makes you think so?"

"Well, I've had the feeling that I'm being watched—you know the feeling."

"Well, you'd better make certain and, if it looks that way, I'll have to take you away, and put someone else on the job!"

"I see!"

X turned to the girl.

"And you?"

"Not very much better than Mr. Cazelton, I'm afraid. As he said, it's not easy."

"You heard my reply to that remark," said X crisply. "Anyway, what have you found out?"

"As I've told you, the man Watson is in it up to the hilt. He is, I understand, looking after the city end, whatever that may mean."

X's eyes flickered.

"It might mean a lot! You've scored one there. Go on!"

"This man Pullinger—by the way, that isn't his name any longer. His name now is Britton—B-r-i-t-t-o-n—and he has his passport. It is in this name—William Henry Britton—which, until a week or two ago, was the property of an obscure retired tradesman in Clapham."

"And why isn't it his any longer?"

"Because he's dead.'

"Do you mean—"

"Oh, no! He died quite naturally and quietly, and was buried by our friends in Angell road. His name is still in the directory, and on the voters' list, and what not. Then they get a phony solicitor of theirs to identify him, etc., and there you are!"

"That's interesting, too," said X. "Anything else? You were going to say something about Mr. Pullinger-Britton, weren't you?"

"Oh, yes. He's been talking to me a little—letting a few small kittens out of the bag. He informs me he's got a great scheme on—very secret, and all that, but very big money in it. He's the brains of the concern, and the leader of the active part of it. The capital—which is vast—is being found by certain millionaires."

"Ah!" X interrupted. "They're the fellows we want to know about."

"I've got the name of one—but there are several. The one is Cyrus P. Conningham."

X nodded. His tensit; gave the suggestion of a hound on the trail.

"German-American. Steel and oil. Self-made man, from very bad material. Child, you're certainly doing well! Anything else?"

"Nothing much — very vague stuff. I think it's likely I shall be paying a visit shortly to this place that Mr. Cazelton has spoken of—the Nest, at Chenham. Otto—that's Pullinger or Britton—has asked me if I wouldn't like a day or two in the country, near the sea. That, I imagine, would be Chenham."

X nodded.

"This secret business has something to do with airplanes—we've guessed that, of course. But they seem to have some secret place, which they speak of sometimes as 'the Depot,' and sometimes as 'the Factory.' Apparently it is a long way away—somewhere abroad—and it seems to be on an island."

"Ah!" ejaculated X, and now his eyes were agleam with excitement. "Now, that is something really vital—at the moment. Have you heard anything more about it?"

"Yesterday Otto took me to Angell road again. He was talking in another room. I could only hear broken fragments of the conversation, but I gathered that they had got someone or some people at the Factory, and that they were proving obstinate. Then someone said that Trent would be able to manage them all right, and Otto said he wasn't so sure. Trent was too gentlemanly in his notions—that was the exact phrase he used—and that he might have to go out there himself. And that's about all, I'm afraid."

"Have you any idea who this Trent is?" X's voice had the sound of ice and steel in it.

"He's someone of importance at this Factory, and, I gather, is in charge of these air operations which are so vital to the scheme, whatever it is!"

X sighed.

"Yes, that's what we want to know—exactly what it is." He paused, and stared at Coral. But he was looking through her, and not at her. At last he spoke again: "You have done very well," he said, slowly. "Extraordinarily well!" Cazelton stared, a trifle sulkily. This was unusual praise from X. "And these are the important items which claim your immediate attention, from now on. First, and most important, try to find out more about this factory or depot—particularly, where it's located. The lives of two good men may depend on your getting that information. Secondly, find out all you can about this man Trent."

There was a moment's silence, then she answered:

"I will do my best, of course. But it will be difficult. There is one thing, though—"

She broke off and remained silent. X said sharply:

"Well—what?"

Her reply came slowly. She seemed a little embarrassed, and flushed slightly as she spoke:

"It is just possible that if he—Otto—goes out to that place, I might get him to—take me with him!"

X gave that a moment's consideration, then said, very gravely:

"If you could contrive that, it would be a great—a very great—thing. But it wouldn't be fair not to warn you that if you do, you will carry your life in your hands."

Surprised, she burst out laughing.

"How sweet of you to warn me—but it will hardly be a change. I am doing that now, you know. These fellows are tough, and I don't like to think about what might happen to me if they found out my real game." She gave a little shudder. "But we won't talk about that. You can rely on me to do my utmost."

X laid his hand on hers for an instant, and his voice was very kind.

"You have courage, my dear. And I'm sure I can rely on you. And now, I think this merry meeting had better end. It's quite likely you are being watched, Coral—also Cazelton. I don't think anyone dogging either of you would be able to get in here, but one never knows. I will leave you now—and you two'd better separate soon afterwards. I won't go yet, but when I do I shall leave, as I came, by the back entrance. Good night—and good luck."

When he had gone Cazelton remarked, rather gloomily:

"A remarkable man, that!"

"Yes, isn't he," she agreed, eagerly. "Oh, I think he is wonderful."

She used almost the tone of a schoolgirl "fan" speaking of her pet screen actor, and Charles shot a quick look at her. It was such a marked change from the very brisk, business-like manner she had shown hitherto.

"I gather you haven't been one of X's people long," he said. "But you're knocking spots off some of us oldsters, by the look of it."

"No," she answered, "I have not been working for him long. But he has been so wonderfully good to me—before, you know."

She said no more, and Cazelton asked no questions. He could be tactful on occasion.

Presently she mused:

"I wonder what he meant when he said that the lives of two men might depend on information about this island, or whatever it is?"

"Putting two in two together," he answered, "I should imagine he's got a couple of men looking around out there, and he's afraid they're in danger."

She looked Charles square in the eyes.

"If that's so, they probably are! Perhaps they're the ones who are obstinate."

"I shouldn't be surprised!"

"Then they have my sympathy. I shouldn't like to be in the hands of this gang if they'd got anything against me . . . and I may be, too, some time!" She rose suddenly to her feet. "Here, this won't do! I'm getting morbid! Just take me back to the ballroom, will you? And drop me, nicely and publicly!"

Charles Cazelton went to look for Toni. He found her dancing, but she flashed him a message with her eyes that she wanted to speak to him.

He waited until she was free, and then claimed her. They danced for a couple of minutes, and then she said:

"Take me and get me a drink. I want to talk to you."

Of course it was about Gun she wanted to talk. Charles, listening to what she had to say, looked grave.

"What's it all about?" she asked him.

"I know nothing, Toni."

"Liar!" she said bluntly. "You mean you won't tell me."

He shook his head.

"I KNOW nothing—but I DO suspect something. But, of course, I mustn't talk."

"Just tell me one thing. Do you think Gun is safe?"

"Don't be silly—we're seldom safe at this game. But don't start worrying, Toni sweet. Gun can take care of himself. Hasn't he proved it, over and over again? But now I must bolt—I have things to do."

And as he made his way to the front door, he was thinking to himself:

"Poor old Gun! It looks to me as though he's up against it!"

Trent's patent torture of "elimination of amenities," as he called it, was certainly an ingenious one. Gun and Tommy had now been in confinement for eleven days, and there was little enough left to them. Potatoes, meat and codiments had gone, one by one, so that they were reduced to a diet of bread, dry biscuits and water. Milk, sugar, tea and coffee had been withdrawn some time ago. And the previous evening they had found there was no light—the electricity had been cut off.

"Well, we're getting down to rock bottom now!" Tommy had suggested, gloomily. "The devil can't take much more away from us!"

"Don't shout too loud!" Gun advised him. "He's hardly realized the full value of such trifles as salt and sugar until now."

The next morning when they rose, they found that the water was no longer possible.

Tommy was aghast.

"Hell, but this is getting a bit TOO thick!" he exclaimed, angrily.

"I agree!" Gun replied. "But—what are you going to do about it—unless you choose to give in?"

"You know damn well I won't do that! Or, at least, I hope you do! But, by God, I'll knock that swine's block off, when he turns up this morning."

"I wouldn't, if I were you," Gun advised. "He's got the whip hand, you know."

"Maybe he has!" growled Tommy. "But I'll show him I've got a hard fist, even if it ain't a mailed one. You watch! Besides, if I don't do it now, I shall soon be too damned weak to, at this rate!"

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

"OUR JOBS seldom are easy," X reminded Charles Cazelton.

"I suppose not. Oh, yes, there's one other thing. I believe I've been spotted—or, at any rate, am an object of suspicion."

"Indeed? That's a pity. But what makes you think so?"

"Well, I've had the feeling that I'm being watched—you know the feeling."

"Well, you'd better make certain and, if it looks that way, I'll have to take you away, and put someone else on the job!"

"I see!"

X turned to the girl.

"And you?"

"Not very much better than Mr. Cazelton, I'm afraid. As he said, it's not easy."

"You heard my reply to that remark," said X crisply. "Anyway, what have you found out?"

"As I've told you, the man Watson is in it up to the hilt. He is, I understand, looking after the city end, whatever that may mean."

X's eyes flickered.

"It might mean a lot! You've scored one there. Go on!"

"This man Pullinger—by the way, that isn't his name any longer. His name now is Britton—B-r-i-t-t-o-n—and he has his passport. It is in this name—William Henry Britton—which, until a week or two ago, was the property of an obscure retired tradesman in Clapham."

"And why isn't it his any longer?"

"Because he's dead."

"Do you mean—"

"Oh, no! He died quite naturally and quietly, and was buried by our friends in Angell road. His name is still in the directory, and on the voters' list, and what not. Then they get a phony solicitor of theirs to identify him, etc., and there you are!"

"That's interesting, too," said X. "Anything else? You were going to say something about Mr. Pullinger-Britton, weren't you?"

"Oh, yes. He's been talking to me a little—letting a few small kittens out of the bag. He informs me he's got a great scheme on—very secret, and all that, but very big money in it. He's the brains of the concern, and the leader of the active part of it. The capital—which is vast—is being found by certain millionaires."

"Ah!" X interrupted. "They're the fellows we want to know about."

"I've got the name of one—but there are several. The one is Cyrus P. Conningham."

X nodded. His tensity gave the suggestion of a hound on the trail.

"German-American. Steel and oil. Self-made man, from very bad material. Child, you're certainly doing well! Anything else?"

"Nothing much — very vague stuff, I think it's likely I shall be paying a visit shortly to this place that Mr. Cazelton has spoken of—the Nest, at Chenham. Otto—that's Pullinger or Britton—has asked me if I wouldn't like a day or two in the country, near the sea. That, I imagine, would be Chenham."

X nodded.

"This secret business has something to do with airplanes—we've guessed that, of course. But they seem to have some secret place, which they speak of sometimes as 'the Depot,' and sometimes as 'the Factory.' Apparently it is a long way away—somewhere abroad—and it seems to be on an island."

"Ah!" ejaculated X, and now his eyes were agleam with excitement. "Now, that is something really vital—at the moment. Have you heard anything more about it?"

"Yesterday Otto took me to Angell road again. He was talking in another room. I could only hear broken fragments of the conversation, but I gathered that they had got someone or some people at the Factory, and that they were proving obstinate. Then someone said that Trent would be able to manage them all right, and Otto said he wasn't so sure. Trent was too gentlemanly in his notions—that was the exact phrase he used—and that he might have to go out there himself. And that's about all, I'm afraid."

"Have you any idea who this Trent is?" X's voice had the sound of ice and steel in it.

"He's someone of importance at this Factory, and, I gather, is in charge of these air operations which are so vital to the scheme, whatever it is!"

X sighed.

"Yes, that's what we want to know—exactly what it is." He paused, and stared at Coral. But he was looking through her, and not at her. At last he spoke again: "You have done very well," he said, slowly. "Extraordinarily well!" Cazelton stared, a trifle sulkily. This was unusual praise from X. "And these are the important items which claim your immediate attention, from now on. First, and most important, try to find out more about this factory or depot—particularly, where it's located. The lives of two good men may depend on your getting that information. Secondly, find out all you can about this man Trent."

There was a moment's silence, then she answered:

"I will do my best, of course. But it will be difficult. There is one thing, though—"

She broke off and remained silent. X said sharply:

"Well—what?"

Her reply came slowly. She seemed a little embarrassed, and flushed slightly as she spoke:

"It is just possible that if he—Otto—goes out to that place, I might get him to—take me with him!"

X gave that a moment's consideration, then said, very gravely:

"If you could contrive that, it would be a great—a very great—thing. But it wouldn't be fair not to warn you that if you do, you will carry your life in your hands."

Surprised, she burst out laughing.

"How sweet of you to warn me—but it will hardly be a change. I am doing that now, you know. These fellows are tough, and I don't like to think about what might happen to me if they found out my real game." She gave a little shudder. "But we won't talk about that. You can rely on me to do my utmost."

X laid his hand on hers for an instant, and his voice was very kind.

"You have courage, my dear. And I'm sure I can rely on you. And now, I think this merry meeting had better end. It's quite likely you are being watched, Coral—also Cazelton. I don't think anyone dogging either of you would be able to get in here, but one never knows. I will leave you now—and you two'd better separate soon afterwards. I won't go yet, but when I do I shall leave, as I came, by the back entrance. Good night—and good luck."

He rose, bowed formally to Coral, and strode away.

When he had gone Cazelton remarked, rather gloomily:

"A remarkable man, that!"

"Yes, isn't he," she agreed, eagerly. "Oh, I think he is wonderful."

She used almost the tone of a schoolgirl "fan" speaking of her pet screen actor, and Charles shot a quick look at her. It was such a marked change from the very brisk, business-like manner she had shown hitherto.

"I gather you haven't been one of X's people long," he said. "But you're knocking spots off some of us oldsters, by the look of it."

"No," she answered, "I have not been working for him long. But he has been so wonderfully good to me—before, you know."

She said no more, and Cazelton asked no questions. He could be tactful on occasion.

Presently she mused:

"I wonder what he meant when he said that the lives of two men might depend on information about this island, or whatever it is?"

"Putting two 'in two together," he answered, "I should imagine he's got a couple of men looking around out there, and he's afraid they're in danger."

She looked Charles square in the eyes.

"If that's so, they probably are! Perhaps they're the ones who are obstinate."

"I shouldn't be surprised!"

"Then they have my sympathy. I shouldn't like to be in the hands of this gang if they'd got anything against me . . . and I may be, too, some time!" She rose suddenly to her feet. "Here, this won't do! I'm getting morbid! Just take me back to the ballroom, will you? And drop me, nicely and publicly!"

Charles Cazelton went to look for Toni. He found her dancing, but she flashed him a message with her eyes that she wanted to speak to him.

He waited until she was free, and then claimed her. They danced for a couple of minutes, and then she said:

"Take me and get me a drink. I want to talk to you."

Of course it was about Gun she wanted to talk. Charles, listening to what she had to say, looked grave.

"What's it all about?" she asked him.

"I know nothing, Toni."

"Liar!" she said bluntly. "You mean you won't tell me."

He shook his head.

"I KNOW nothing—but I DO suspect something. But, of course, I mustn't talk."

"Just tell me one thing. Do you think Gun is safe?"

"Don't be silly—we're seldom safe at this game. But don't start worrying, Toni sweet. Gun can take care of himself. Hasn't he proved it, over and over again? But now I must bolt—I have things to do."

And as he made his way to the front door, he was thinking to himself:

Trent's patent torture of "elimination of amenities," as he called it, was certainly an ingenious one. Gun and Tommy had now been in confinement for eleven days, and there was little enough left to them. Potatoes, meat and codiments had gone, one by one, so that they were reduced to a diet of bread, dry biscuits and water. Milk, sugar, tea and coffee had been withdrawn some time ago. And the previous evening they had found there was no light—the electricity had been cut off.

"Well, we're getting down to rock bottom now!" Tommy had suggested, gloomily. "The devil can't take much more away from us!"

"Don't shout too loud!" Gun advised him. "He's hardly realized the full value of such trifles as salt and sugar until now."

The next morning when they rose, they found that the water was no longer possible.

Tommy was aghast.

"Hell, but this is getting a bit TOO thick!" he exclaimed, angrily.

"I agree!" Gun replied. "But—what are you going to do about it—unless you choose to give in?"

"You know damn well I won't do that! Or, at least, I hope you do! But, by God, I'll knock that swine's block off, when he turns up this morning."

"I wouldn't, if I were you," Gun advised. "He's got the whip hand, you know."

"Maybe he has!" growled Tommy. "But I'll show him I've got a hard fist, even if it ain't a mailed one. You watch! Besides, if I don't do it now, I shall soon be too damned weak to, at this rate!"

'Orange and Black' Hits NYA Workers for 'Vandalism'

LONACONING, Sept. 18—Damage of $300 to sixty pictures, property of Central high school, was reported today in editorial and news items in the first issue of the Orange and Black, school publication.

The editorial states that during the summer vacation, there were NYA people from Barton and Frostburg employed at the school for the purpose of repainting walls, radiators and other furniture. To do the painting all the pictures had to be removed.

The editorial declares that instead of stacking the pictures like books on a shelf, they were placed one on top of the other. The glass in most of the pictures was broken or cracked beyond repair by the weight of the pictures on top. The frames were not damaged.

Appearing in the "Principal's Message" was the statement: "The one fly in the ointment is the destruction of a large number of pictures by the carelessness of the NYA workers during the summer months. These boys and girls from Barton and Frostburg had no respect whatever for school property. Such violation should be punished severely."

Two Men, Crazed by 'Black Damp,' Found in Abandoned W. Va. Mine

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 18 (AP)—Two half-nude men, so crazed by hours of exposure to dreaded "black damp" that they tore off most of their clothing, were rescued today from an abandoned coal mine by crews wearing oxygen helmets.

They were rushed to a hospital at Montgomery, where attaches said 21-year-old Earl Mason of Norris Creek had been placed under an oxygen tent. Both Mason and his companion, Elmer Gay, 33, of Montgomery, are expected to recover. They were in the mine 16 1-2 hours.

The men told hospital attendants that they entered the old operation of the Cannelton Coal and Coke Company to obtain coal for their families.

Gay and Mason went in about noon yesterday. Engineer H. G. Houtz of the State Mines Department said. Houtz added it was understood neither ever had been in the mine.

At 11:45 p. m. last night State Inspector Joe Mulligan was notified. He attempted to enter but was driven back by gas fumes and summoned assistance.

Rescue crews from the Elk Ridge mine of the Koppers Coal Company and the Cannelton Coal and Coke Company were brought to the opening near Montgomery in the early morning, carrying out the rescue operations under the direction of Koppers Superintendent Ed Breit.

After searching more than an hour, Houtz said, the crews found Gay and Mason sitting with their backs against the wall of the mine, in a delirium.

They had torn off their caps, mining lamps, shoes and shirt, the engineer related, and were "nearly dead."

"Apparently there was just enough oxygen in the air to keep them alive," Houtz said.

'Orange and Black' Hits NYA Workers for 'Vandalism'

LONACONING, Sept. 18—Damage of $300 to sixty pictures, property of Central high school, was reported today in editorial and news items in the first issue of the Orange and Black, school publication.

The editorial states that during the summer vacation, there were NYA people from Barton and Frostburg employed at the school for the purpose of repainting walls, radiators and other furniture. To do the painting all the pictures had to be removed.

The editorial declares that instead of stacking the pictures like books on a shelf, they were placed one on top of the other. The glass in most of the pictures was broken or cracked beyond repair by the weight of the pictures on top. The frames were not damaged.

Appearing in the "Principal's Message" was the statement: "The one fly in the ointment is the destruction of a large number of pictures by the carelessness of the NYA workers during the summer months. These boys and girls from Barton and Frostburg had no respect whatever for school property. Such violation should be punished severely."

Two Men, Crazed by 'Black Damp,' Found in Abandoned W. Va. Mine

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 18 (AP)—Two half-nude men, so crazed by hours of exposure to dreaded "black damp" that they tore off most of their clothing, were rescued today from an abandoned coal mine by crews wearing oxygen helmets.

They were rushed to a hospital at Montgomery, where attaches said 21-year-old Earl Mason of Norris Creek had been placed under an oxygen tent. Both Mason and his companion, Elmer Gay, 33, of Montgomery, are expected to recover. They were in the mine 16 1-2 hours.

The men told hospital attendants that they entered the old operation of the Cannelton Coal and Coke Company to obtain coal for their families.

Gay and Mason went in about noon yesterday. Engineer H. G. Houtz of the State Mines Department said. Houtz added it was understood neither ever had been in the mine.

At 11:45 p. m. last night State Inspector Joe Mulligan was notified. He attempted to enter but was driven back by gas fumes and summoned assistance.

Rescue crews from the Elk Ridge mine of the Koppers Coal Company and the Cannelton Coal and Coke Company were brought to the opening near Montgomery in the early morning, carrying out the rescue operations under the direction of Koppers Superintendent Ed Breit.

After searching more than an hour, Houtz said, the crews found Gay and Mason sitting with their backs against the wall of the mine, in a delirium.

They had torn off their caps, mining lamps, shoes and shirt, the engineer related, and were "nearly dead."

"Apparently there was just enough oxygen in the air to keep them alive," Houtz said.

Football Official Explains Changes in Rules for '40

(The following interpretation of the of the major 1940 football rules changes was prepared by E. C. Krieger, noted gridiron official and editor of "Questions and Answers on the Football Rules." Krieger is a member of the advisory committee of officials of the N.C.A.A. rules committee.)

By E. C. KRIEGER

Written for Associated Press Feature Service

COLUMBUS, O.—Sixteen changes clarification or refinements in the 1940 collegiate football rules will cause Mr. Average Fan little real concern. They are designed principally to facilitate administration of the game.

For instance, time permitted for putting the ball in play was cut from 30 to 25 seconds, but this is really not much of a restriction. At least two independent surveys placed the average time in putting the ball into play at approximately 20 seconds.

The next time you scream at a referee because you think your time, discover with your own favorites' opponents are killing time, discover with your own watch what a long interval is required for 25 seconds to pass. The count begins when the referee has announced the down and the ball is ready for play.

There have been infrequent instances of an extra play being allowed after the end of a period, and their rarity is likely to be even more pronounced in the future. Such plays, formerly allowed because of a foul on the last play of the period, are allowed now only if the foul is by opponents of the team which puts the ball into play and is committed while this team still has possession of the ball.

Coaches who wanted to make greater use of the "shovel pass" promoted a change in the passing rules.

More Shovel Passes?

Last year if an ineligible player touched a forward pass the penalty was 15 yards and loss of a down, even though the violation occurred behind the scrimmage line. The coaches contended that chances of hitting an ineligible player with a "shovel pass" were too great and the play was rapidly dying out on that account.

This year, when a forward pass touches an ineligible player on or behind the line of scrimmage the penalty is merely loss of a down. To keep the smart boys from pegging a pass to an ineligible player to escape being trapped for lost yardage, such action is penalized in the same manner as intentionally grounding a forward pass—15 yards and loss of a down, enforced from where the ball was put in play.

Occasionally, a player will kick a free ball, usually accidentally, in attempting to pick to up. For many years only the deliberate act of kicking a free ball was considered a foul. The penalty was loss of the ball at the spot of the illegal kicking. In 1936, Yale's Larry Kelley attempted to retrieve a fumbled ball and kicked it toward the opponents' goal line before he recovered it. A winning Yale touchdown followed.

Opponents claimed Larry's kick was not accidental and in 1937 the "accidental" clause was eliminated from the rule. The 1940 rules reinstate the "accidental" feature and only a deliberate kick will be considered illegal.

Quick Kicker Not Immune

With the development of the play where the ball is punted from two or three yards behind the line, known as a "quick kick" the kicker was much more likely to be run into or roughed because it was not so obvious to the defensive players that he was going to kick.

The rule has now been modified to give the kicker specific protection only when he kicks from behind his line of scrimmage and only when it is reasonably obvious that he is going to kick. Of course, the "quick kicker" can't be indiscriminately roughed after kicking.

To offset a prevailing impression that when the ball is kicked off, players of the kicking team could not touch the ball until it touched an opponent or reached the restraining line of the recivers (commonly expressed by fans as "going 10 yards") specific coverage of such a play appears in this year's rules.

The ruling is that any player may touch or recover the ball after it has been kicked off, but if the kicking team recovers it before it reaches the opponents' restraining line (unless it has been touched by one of the receivers) the ball will have to be kicked off again.

Pass Interference

A question of contact interference on forward passes has also been further clarified. In 1937, it was definitely established that opposing players have equal right to the ball while it is in the air. Contact (except unnecessary roughness) occuring between players after the ball was to be disregarded. The matter of "unavoidable" collision of opposing players while running toward the ball is covered now and it is believed that the intention is to evaluate the circumstances in each case and penalize when warranted.

The balance of the changes and clarifications in the rules are of no particular interest to the fan but are primarily of importance to coaches, players and officials. The changes apply to the collegiate game, but do not in every case apply to the professional game or in some states, to high school play.

Club Social League Closes Its Season

The Club Social League brought its summer bowling season to an official close with its semi-annual banquet at the Queen City Hotel Sunday night.

Acting as toastmaster was Thomas Boyle, president of the league. Short speeches were made by practically everyone present and the affair proved one of the most successful ever staged by the league, which rolls the year around.

Attending were John Stitcher, Wilkie Collins, Willis Robosson, John King, Dan Langer, Frank Stakem, Francis Bareis, James King, Patrick J. Stakem, Glenn Hockman, Harry Balch, Curt Felton, John McGeady, Carl King, Brad Gibbs, William C. McDermott, Sr., William C. McDermott, Jr., Tom Brooks, Adolf Duerr and Pete Boyle.

Following the banquet, a match between the older men and the "youngsters" was rolled with the "rookies" defeating the veterans by 82 pins.

The Club won the summer championship by defeating Embassy by 294 sticks in a five-game rolloff match. Robosson of the Club had high set with 780 while James King of Embassy turned in the best single game, 192. Team totals were 3,647 to 3,353. If the match had been rolled on a game basis, Club would have taken all five.

John Stitcher of Embassy had the best average for the season with 152 for 54 games. Wilkie Collins of the Club was second with 149 for 30 games while Willis Robosson of Club and John King tied for third with 148. The summary of the rolloff match and individual averages for the season follow:

Red Fans Are Not Excited as Team Clinches Flag

CINCINNATI, Sept. 18. (AP)—So the Reds won the pennant again, did they?

Cincinnati's natives, who love their ball club as much as their wives and even more on home Sundays, took the news with aplomb.

It wasn't lack of interest, it was just that as far as Joe Fan was concerned, the matter was settled some days ago and the mathematics of the situation was merely something to amuse statisticians.

So as the newsboys yelled, "Reds win the pennant," the fans bought their evening papers, noted the score, and turned to other matters of import, like the battles of London and the American League.

Even in this town, to which the American League is merely an organization that is represented in the World Series annualy as a matter of custom, the hot race in the junior loop is the curbstone topic.

In fact, for more than a month now, the only question has been an unqualified, "who do we play in the series."

A possible plurality is pulling for Detroit, with Cleveland a close second, but a noisy minority of diehards want to play the New York Yankees and get revenge for last year's trimming.

However, if you think this concern with matters somewhat removed from the vital things of a Cincinnation's life means anything, try and buy a ticket for the series.

Patsy Campbell, 23 months, didn't win the Atlantic City baby show, but got a tasty lollypop for consolation.

Coaches who wanted to make greater use of the "shovel pass" promoted a change in the passing rules.

More Shovel Passes?

Last year if an ineligible player touched a forward pass the penalty was 15 yards and loss of a down, even though the violation occurred behind the scrimmage line. The coaches contended that chances of hitting an ineligible player with a "shovel pass" were too great and the play was rapidly dying out on that account. This year, when a forward pass touches an ineligible player on or behind the line of scrimmage the penalty is merely loss of a down. To keep the smart boys from pegging a pass to an ineligible player to escape being trapped for lost yardage, such action is penalized in the same manner as intentionally grounding a forward pass—15 yards and loss of a down, enforced from where the ball was put in play.

Occasionally, a player will kick a free ball, usually accidentally, in attempting to pick to up. For many years only the deliberate act of kicking a free ball was considered a foul. The penalty was loss of the ball at the spot of the illegal kicking. In 1936, Yale's Larry Kelley attempted to retrieve a fumbled ball and kicked it toward the opponents' goal line before he recovered it. A winning Yale touchdown followed.

Opponents claimed Larry's kick was not accidental and in 1937 the "accidental" clause was eliminated from the rule. The 1940 rules reinstate the "accidental" feature and only a deliberate kick will be considered illegal.

Quick Kicker Not Immune

With the development of the play where the ball is punted from two or three yards behind the line, known as a "quick kick" the kicker was much more likely to be run into or roughed because it was not so obvious to the defensive players that he was going to kick.

The rule has now been modified to give the kicker specific protection only when he kicks from behind his line of scrimmage and only when it is reasonably obvious that he is going to kick. Of course, the "quick kicker" can't be indiscriminately roughed after kicking.

To offset a prevailing impression that when the ball is kicked off, players of the kicking team could not touch the ball until it touched an opponent or reached the restraining line of the receivers (commonly expressed by fans as "going 10 yards") specific coverage of such a play appears in this year's rules.

The ruling is that any player may touch or recover the ball after it has been kicked off, but if the kicking team recovers it before it reaches the opponents' restraining line (unless it has been touched by one of the receivers) the ball will have to be kicked off again.

Pass Interference

A question of contact interference on forward passes has also been further clarified. In 1937, it was definitely established that opposing players have equal right to the ball while it is in the air. Contact (except unnecessary roughness) occuring between players after the ball was to be disregarded. The matter of "unavoidable" collision of opposing players while running toward the ball is covered now and it is believed that the intention is to evaluate the circumstances in each case and penalize when warranted.

The balance of the changes and clarifications in the rules are of no particular interest to the fan but are primarily of importance to coaches, players and officials. The changes apply to the collegiate game, but do not in every case apply to the professional game or in some states, to high school play.

Club Social League Closes Its Season

The Club Social League brought its summer bowling season to an official close with its semi-annual banquet at the Queen City Hotel Sunday night.

Acting as toastmaster was Thomas Boyle, president of the league. Short speeches were made by practically everyone present and the affair proved one of the most successful ever staged by the league, which rolls the year around.

Attending were John Stitcher, Wilkie Collins, Willis Robosson, John King, Dan Langer, Frank Stakem, Francis Bareis, James King, Patrick J. Stakem, Glenn Hockman, Harry Balch, Curt Felton, John McGeady, Carl King, Brad Gibbs, William C. McDermott, Sr., William C. McDermott, Jr., Tom Brooks, Adolf Duerr and Pete Boyle.

Following the banquet, a match between the older men and the "youngsters" was rolled with the "rookies" defeating the veterans by 82 pins.

The Club won the summer championship by defeating Embassy by 294 sticks in a five-game rolloff match. Robosson of the Club had high set with 780 while James King of Embassy turned in the best single game, 192. Team totals were 3,647 to 3,353. If the match had been rolled on a game basis, Club would have taken all five.

John Stitcher of Embassy had the best average for the season with 152 for 54 games. Wilkie Collins of the Club was second with 149 for 30 games while Willis Robosson of Club and John King tied for third with 148. The summary of the rolloff match and individual averages for the season follow:

Red Fans Are Not Excited as Team Clinches Flag

CINCINNATI, Sept. 18. (AP)—So the Reds won the pennant again, did they?

Cincinnati's natives, who love their ball club as much as their wives and even more on home Sundays, took the news with aplomb.

It wasn't lack of interest, it was just that as far as Joe Fan was concerned, the matter was settled some days ago and the mathematics of the situation was merely something to amuse statisticians.

So as the newsboys yelled, "Reds win the pennant," the fans bought their evening papers, noted the score, and turned to other matters of import, like the battles of London and the American League.

Even in this town, to which the American League is merely an organization that is represented in the World Series annualy as a matter of custom, the hot race in the junior loop is the curbstone topic.

In fact, for more than a month now, the only question has been an unqualified, "who do we play in the series."

A possible plurality is pulling for Detroit, with Cleveland a close second, but a noisy minority of diehards want to play the New York Yankees and get revenge for last year's trimming.

However, if you think this concern with matters somewhat removed from the vital things of a Cincinnation's life means anything, try and buy a ticket for the series.

Second Placers . . . And Not Disappointed

Everybody can't be Miss America, but Rosemary La Planche of Los Angeles found a lot of consolation in being among the runners-up at Atlantic City. She won trophies for being the prettiest girl in a bathing suit and for being the most personable girl. She's 18 and has hazel eyes.

Patsy Campbell, 23 months, didn't win the Atlantic City baby show, but got a tasty lollypop for consolation.

Second award in his class in a kennel club show held at Tuxedo Park, N. Y., went to "Bingo," a springer spaniel. But judging by his masters, Beatrice Wagstaff and little brother David, "Bingo" still is a champion playmate.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKE HIM LEAD TO YOU

NOBODY likes to have a declarer hold a "grand coup" position over his trump honor, leading established winners through him toward a trump tenace. Your assignment in such a crisis is to strive your best to throw the lead into the declarer's hand, so that he will have to lead into your holding from his own.

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♥	3 ♣	3 ♦
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Dbl

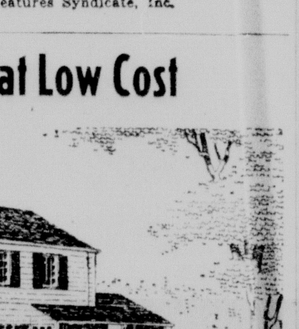

North's final bid, with only two of his partner's singly rebid suit, was a magnificent expression of confidence in his partner's playing ability, or his opponents' lack of it. Regardless of which, it was richly justified.

South ruffed the third heart, went to dummy with the club A and finessed the spade J. The fall of the 10 made him place East with the rest of the suit. So he went to the club K and followed with the Q. If East had ruffed this, throwing the lead into the South hand, the contract would have been set positively with a trick in trumps and one in diamonds. But East discarded a diamond and so did South.

Next declarer led the spade 8. Carelessly East played the 5, so South played low and let the lead stay in dummy. He then led the club 10. East ruffed this with the 9, but much too late. South overruffed and had the rest of the tricks except for a diamond at the end.

Tomorrow's Problem

If West makes a psych bid of 1-Club on this hand, what should be the ensuing course of the bidding?

Jeffrey Lynn, playing the role of a young bank executive, becomes involved in the case and is forced to solve the crime in order to clear his own name. He is helped by Brenda Marshall who is seen as the wife of one of the bank clerks.

Suspecting her own husband, played by Roger Pryor, of implication in the case, Miss Marshall does her best to help Lynn track down the master-mind in back of the gang of criminals.

The film depicts the almost insurmountable odds the Mormons conquered on their heroic trek from Nauvoo, Illinois, to what is now Salt Lake City.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

MAKE HIM LEAD TO YOU

NOBODY likes to have a declarer hold a "grand coup" position over his trump honor, leading established winners through him toward a trump tenace. Your assignment in such a crisis is to strive your best to throw the lead into the declarer's hand, so that he will have to lead into your holding from his own.

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♥	3 ♣	3 ♦
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Dbl

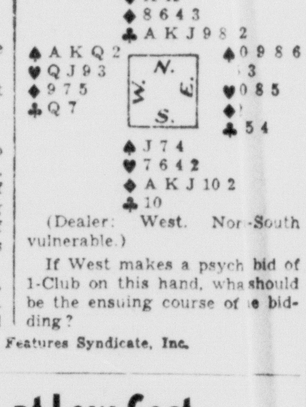

North's final bid, with only two of his partner's singly rebid suit, was a magnificent expression of confidence in his partner's playing ability, or his opponents' lack of it. Regardless of which, it was richly justified.

South ruffed the third heart, went to dummy with the club A and finessed the spade J. The fall of the 10 made him place East with the rest of the suit. So he went to the club K and followed with the Q. If East had ruffed this, throwing the lead into the South hand, the contract would have been set positively with a trick in trumps and one in diamonds. But East discarded a diamond and so did South.

Next declarer led the spade 8. Carelessly East played the 5, so South played low and let the lead stay in dummy. He then led the club 10. East ruffed this with the 9, but much too late. South overruffed and had the rest of the tricks except for a diamond at the end.

Cincinnati Clinches National League Flag

Reds Beat Phils 4-3 in Thirteenth As Dodgers Lose

Johnny Vander Meer Wins Own Game on Double To Score

Margin of Twelve Games Ties Down Second Straight Flag

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds won their second straight National League pennant today by beating the Phillies, 4 to 3 in a 13-inning struggle as the second place Brooklyn Dodgers lost to St. Louis.

He doubled to left, went to third on an infield grounder and scored on Ival Goodman's fly to Rizzo.

The Reds took over first place on July 7 and were never ousted. They did not clinch the flag in 1939 until September 28, three days before the season ended, when they took a 3½ game edge over the Cardinals.

The victory today gave the Reds a margin of 12 games over Brooklyn.

After Vander Meer scored in the 13th he was replaced by Joe Beggs who retired the Phils in one, two, three order.

Joe Marty saved the Phils from defeat in the 10th by smashing his third double of the game off the right field wall with two out. The drive scored Art Mahan from first.

"I'm glad it's all over," said Manager Bill McKechnie of the Reds in the clubhouse after the game.

The Reds with 13 games left to play, now hold a 12-game lead over the Dodgers. Cincinnati has won 93 games and lost 47. Brooklyn, with 10 games to play, has won 83 and lost 61.

"We now can go ahead and prepare for the world series, something we were unable to do last year. We'll take it easy for a day or two and then start getting ready," McKechnie said as his men slapped each other on the back and shouted in delight.

With Bucky Walters, Paul Derringer and Junior Thompson chalking up 54 victories between them the Reds were never worse than third this year. They haven't lost more than three games in a row and including today's, have won 38 games by one run.

Their worst record was in August when they split even, winning 16 and losing 16. So far this month they have won 16 and lost two.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP)—Nobody watches a marble game while a fight is going on up the street, so the state of affairs at Philadelphia while the fans have been holding the coats of the major league pennant contenders has been pretty much ignored.

The Philadelphia entries have been more than generous to their followers. Instead of offering them a last-place club they say: "Take a lot; take two," and as a consequence the present season completes the picture of the Phillies and Athletics finishing in the basement a total of eight times since 1934. Each has been down there four times. The other years they finished seventh.

It's been a sad season for the Phils from all standpoints. In addition to their victory famine, their attendance is about that of a Tuesday afternoon sewing circle. A 6,000 crowd is very good, and when it reaches 8,000 the players begin to get stage fright.

Our informant says there is no criticism of good Doc Prothro. He's doing the best possible with the material available, and the outlook for the immediate future seems hopeless unless some ball players are purchased, an uncertain prospect.

Johnny Ogden has done a grand job with the Phil farm system, but it's still quite a trick to jump players from class C and D clubs to the majors.

On top of those troubles, there are rumors that Hugh Mulcahy and Kirby Higbe, two fine pitchers, might be sold.

* * *

As for the Athletics, the most rabid fan's disappointment cannot match that of the venerable Connie Mack. Connie was known to be figuring on a first-division club in 1941.

The A's infield has been spotty. Benny McCoy has been a great disappointment. Benny just doesn't seem to have an infielder's hands. Dick Siebert is a good first baseman, but there is no denying the infield will have to be revamped before another season.

Sam Chapman is the best prospect among the outfielders. Wallie Moses is fair, and Bob Johnson, potent stickman, is 32 and getting no younger rapidly.

Oddly enough, Connie has had a good year financially. The A's haven't been able to string together a consistent winning streak, but they have given the fans a run for their money. The only trouble there is that a run usually wasn't enough.

Cellar Dwelling Athletics Knock Tigers from Lead

Score Nine Runs in Ninth of Nightcap To Win 13 to 6

Bengals Win Opener as Bridges and Seats Hurl, 14 to 0

DETROIT, Sept. 18 (AP)—For the second straight day the cellar-dwelling Philadelphia Athletics rose up to knock a team out of the American League lead.

The A's, who shoved Cleveland down to second place yesterday, exploded a nine-run rally in the final inning of the second game today to gain a 13 to 6 victory and a split with the Detroit Tigers in a double header played before 12,737 fans.

Coupled with Cleveland's double win over Washington, the nightcap loss dropped Detroit a half-game behind the Indians in the wild late September pennant scramble.

The Tigers won the first game, 14 to 0, as Tommy Bridges and Tom Seats pitched shut-out ball and Hank Greenberg belted two of the three homers he hit during the afternoon.

Nine Runs in Ninth

The Athletics' nine-run game-winning rally was started by pinch-hitter Chubby Dean with an infield single after one was out. Before the Tigers could retire two more men the Macks had rapped out nine more hits, including a homer by Bob Johnson with two teammates on base.

George Caster went the route for the Athletics in the opener and was tagged for 17 hits. Bridges and Seats, who came in at the start of the seventh to give Bridges a chance to rest for the Cleveland series opening here Friday, allowed only six blows.

The second game was a see-saw battle between Johnny Gorsica, of the Tigers, and Ed Heusser, of the A's, until the fifth when Greenberg's last homer sparked a two-run assault that gave Detroit a 6 to 4 lead. Gorsica pitched to only nine batsmen in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings.

Greenberg Has Streak

Gorsica was lifted after the A's had tied the score in the ninth, Seats coming in for his second relief chore of the day. He got Dee Miles on a foul fly but seven straight hits followed and Clay Smith then came in to strike out Floyd Wagner and finally end the nightmare.

Greenberg's homers today gave him the league leadership in this department with 38. He has batted 12 circuit blows in Detroit's last 15 games.

The Tigers play the A's in another twin bill tomorrow and then meet the Indians in a three-game week-end series.

Darkness Helps Yankees Divide With White Sox

Take Second Game 9-8 after Losing First of Dual Bill 6-3

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP)—Darkness descended upon Comiskey Park today just in time to help the New York Yankees to edge out the Chicago White Sox 9 to 8 in eight innings in the second game of a doubleheader after the Sox had elated a rabid crowd of 37,331 South Siders by copping the opener 6 to 3.

Chicago needed a double victory today to move over the champs into third place and for awhile it looked as though the Sox would do it. Both games were ding-dong battles all the way.

The Yanks were held to six hits in the first game by Lefty Thornton Lee, but mixed five of them with two errors for all their runs in the fourth and fifth frames. This made it necessary for the Sox to stage a four-run rally of their own in the sixth to win.

In the nightcap the Yankees opened up with four runs in the first inning and Chicago came right back with five in its half. The Sox got three more on five hits in the fourth.

But in the seventh George Selkirk homered with two on and in the eighth Joe DiMaggio, out of action with a leg injury, led off with a pinch double. Mike Chartak delivered a pinch single for one run and Charley Keller doubled for another.

The game was called because of darkness after a double play helped snuff out the Sox in short order.

Juniors To Practice

The Junior Association of Commerce softball team, slated to oppose B. and O. Bolt and Forge tossers Sunday in opening games of the Rocking Chair League title series, will practice on the Fort Hill High diamond this evening at 5 o'clock.

JENKINS DOWN BUT NOT OUT!

Lew Jenkins, the lightweight Sweetwater (Tex.) swatter, appears to be praying as he reposes on the canvas for the count of nine. Towering above him is Bob Montgomery, who could not keep up the battering attack, losing the 10-round non-title bout on decision in Philadelphia.

THE YANKEE SHAY

Did you ever hear of the One-Hoss Shay?
That ran and ran like a stout machine,
Then fell apart in a single day
And buckled up by the village green?
Every part of it fell apart
As the Deacon flopped with a startled start.

The One-Hoss Shay was a marvelous cart.
Not a cog went wrong — not a bolt was loose.
Year after year it was set to start,
A perfect Shay for an endless use.
"It will run forever," the neighbors said.
Till they looked at the debris just ahead.

The Yanks are the One-Hoss Shay this year.
Not one by one — but all in a bunch —
Wheel and axle and bolt and gear,
They lost their pitching—they lost their punch—
But after all, when you think it over,
Life's not an endless dream in clover.

Concerning the Yankees

There is one thing to be said about the Yankees. As a team, win or lose, they have been the most consistent machine of all time. They came up and ruled the game for four years—as a team.

When they crashed—they fell apart as a team.

No one can look back on the waning campaign of 1940 and pick out any Yankee goats. Not one goat or two goats or three goats.

They rose and fell together.

No one can throw the blame on Bill Dickey, Red Ruffing, Lefty Gomez, Joe Gordon, Red Rolfe, Frank Crosetti or Joe DiMaggio.

They all hit the soapy chute, head and head, arm in arm.

Part of this was physical. Part of it was psychological. Part of it was the iron shod turn of Lature—

"As this old world goes roun' roun' and roun',
Some go up—and some go down."

There is no such thing as perpetual motion—upward or downward. Life is so constructed that one learns more from defeat than from victory.

This is an invalauble law of compensation. If it wasn't that way, what any upside-down existence this would be.

The Yankees, on one side, were assailed by a physical downward drifting—Dickey, Ruffing, Gomez and others—stars who had been big factors in their phenomenal supremacy.

They were attacked on another side by too much success. They were rated 3 to 5 shots against the field as the 1940 season opened. They were kick-ins. This was bound to have a bad effect on the entire team. I mean psychologically.

Explaining the Why

I have been asked over and over how an entire team could hit the gravel road in a bunch.

It wasn't just a matter of three or four important cogs through the first three months—but Dickey, —Ruffing—Gomez—Gordon — Rolfe —Crosetti—Sundra—to mention only a few.

In the first place, don't forget that the Yankee battery of Ruffing and Dickey was one of the greatest in baseball along with Mathewson and Bresnahan — Johnson and Streit—Brow nand Kling — Grove and Cochrane—Waddel and Schreck —Alexander and Killifer—on an on.

DiMaggio remains the leading factor through the team's last desperate charge before most of the cast fell apart.

Bill Dickey has been a major factor for many years. He is a twelve year veteran back of the plate. Dickey is the only catcher in history who ever drove in more than 100 runs four years.

Red Ruffing has been one of the most effective pitchers in the old clutch year after year. But Red finished with a bad arm after the last world series and he has never been the old Red since.

Don't overlook Gomez and Dickey —another great battery pair—one of the best of all time. Gomez also came to a heavy cropper in the same Red world series with a bad side and a bad arm.

Here's the start of a big slump.

In fact one of the smartest baseball experts, I happen to know, still believes that if the Reds had won that fourth game in Cincinnati —which they had bottled up—they might easily have won the series.

How? Because Ruffing and Gomez and Pearson all had bad arms and were useless the remainder of the route.

The Fire Spreads

Here was the triple battery—Ruffing and Dickey—Gomez and Dickey — Pearson and Dickey — that largely through wear and tear—the drift of the years—lost a good part of its effectiveness. From here the fire began to spread to batting eyes. The Yankees have shown their old time thunder with the war club, here and there.

But all you need do is to look at the batting averages, compared to a year ago—DiMaggio, Keller, Gordon, Dickey, Crosetti, Rolfe—from 75 to 90 points on the short side. Gordon, however, is now coming back with a rush.

The Real Gordon

Buddy Rosar and Henrich and Selkirk have held their own—or better. Rosar has turned in a fine assisting job.

But no team can have such men as Dickey, Ruffing, Gomez, Pearson, Gordon, Keller and Crosetti take such a dip and still keep winning.

Not against such teams as Detroit and Cleveland, who have both the pitching and the hitting, and who are now removed from the old Yankee shadow.

Dick Bartell has helped to make the Tiger infield. Hank Greenberg has again been a major factor at bat, plus high class work in the field.

School Boy Rowe has come back with a rush—and Buck Newsom has been one of the star pitchers of the year.

Charlie Gehringer may be slipping after long and brilliant service, but he is still a great ball player for any club.

Cleveland in Bob Feller has one of the great pitchers of all time—one who may finish as the greatest if the drum and bugle don't break up his career.

Cleveland has the best second base combination in the game today in Boudreau and Mack — and Cleveland has pitching aids in Milnar, Smith and Mel Harder to carry on the job.

I happen to know the few who believe the Yankees were on the big drift last April, figured the Red Sox as their logical successors. But Red Sox pitching has let the rest of the team down with an old fashioned thud.

You can't win minus consistent pitching. I'll give you all the sluggers. Give me Feller, Derringer, Walters and Newsom. Plus one good left hander.

Woolen and Rayon pin-spillers were on top of the heap after the second week's action in the Celanese Warehouse Mixed Bowling League with three of the four other combinations closely bunched behind them.

Paced by Reese Early with 436 and Howard Nave's 426 set the Rayon dux-crew snapped back after dropping the first tussle to take the remaining two games from the league-leading Woolen's Johnny Carlton's 406 set was the best the losers could muster.

Lining pin-poppers jumped right back into the thick of the leadership fight by sweeping all three games from the Satin dux-men. Harry Bowman's 421 set led the winners while Charley Hoenicka's 406 was the opposition's best.

Hard luck followed the cellar-dwelling Taffettas again this week. After jumping away to a good lead by easily downing the Crepe-crew in the opening game, they faltered and dropped the remaining two tussles. Driver's 373 set paced the Crepe-hangers while Louie Lippold was high for the lowly Tafettas with a 363 set.

Cincinnati Clinches National League Flag

Margin of Twelve Games Ties Down Second Straight Flag

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds won their second straight National League pennant today by beating the Phillies, 4 to 3 in a 13-inning struggle as the second place Brooklyn Dodgers lost to St. Louis.

The Reds took over first place on July 7 and were never ousted. They did not clinch the flag in 1939 until September 28, three days before the season ended, when they took a 3½ game edge over the Cardinals.

The Reds with 13 games left to play, now hold a 12-game lead over the Dodgers. Cincinnati has won 93 games and lost 47. Brooklyn, with 10 games to play, has won 83 and lost 61.

"We now can go ahead and prepare for the world series, something we were unable to do last year. We'll take it easy for a day or two and then start getting ready," McKechnie said as his men slapped each other on the back and shouted in delight.

With Bucky Walters, Paul Derringer and Junior Thompson chalking up 54 victories between them the Reds were never worse than third this year. They haven't lost more than three games in a row and including today's, have won 38 games by one run.

Their worst record was in August when they split even, winning 16 and losing 16. So far this month they have won 16 and lost two.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP)—Nobody watches a marble game while a fight is going on up the street, so the state of affairs at Philadelphia while the fans have been holding the coats of the major league pennant contenders has been pretty much ignored.

The Philadelphia entries have been more than generous to their followers. Instead of offering them a last-place club they say: "Take a lot, take two," and as a consequence the present season completes the picture of the Phillies and Athletics finishing in the basement a total of eight times since 1934. Each has been down there four times. The other years they finished seventh.

It's been a sad season for the Phils from all standpoints. In addition to their victory famine, their attendance is about that of a Tuesday afternoon sewing circle. A 6,000 crowd is very good, and when it reaches 8,000 the players begin to get stage fright.

Our informant says there is no criticism of good Doc Prothro. He's doing the best possible with the material available, and the outlook for the immediate future seems hopeless unless some ball players are purchased, an uncertain prospect.

Johnny Ogden has done a grand job with the Phil farm system, but it's still quite a trick to jump players from class C and D clubs to the majors.

On top of those troubles, there are rumors that Hugh Mulcahy and Kirby Higbe, two fine pitchers, might be sold.

As for the Athletics, the most rabid fan's disappointment cannot match that of the venerable Connie Mack. Connie was known to be figuring on a first-division club in 1941.

The A's infield has been spotty. Benny McCoy has been a great disappointment. Benny just doesn't seem to have an infielder's hands. Dick Siebert is a good first baseman, but there is no denying the infield will have to be revamped before another season.

Sam Chapman is the best prospect among the outfielders. Wallie Moses is fair, and Bob Johnson, potent stickman, is 32 and getting no younger rapidly.

Oddly enough, Connie has had a good year financially. The A's haven't been able to string together a consistent winning streak, but they have given the fans a run for their money. The only trouble there is that a run usually wasn't enough.

Kiwanis Club League

Firing began this week in the Kiwanis Club Bowling League at Club Recreation with the Parsons registering a sweep victory over the Browns and the Walshs besting the Holmes 2-1. The Walshs won the second game by a six-pin margin.

Cellar Dwelling Athletics Knock Tigers from Lead

Score Nine Runs in Ninth of Nightcap To Win 13 to 6

Bengals Win Opener as Bridges and Seats Hurl, 14 to 0

DETROIT, Sept. 18 (AP)—For the second straight day the cellar-dwelling Philadelphia Athletics rose up to knock a team out of the American League lead.

The A's, who shoved Cleveland down to second place yesterday, exploded a nine-run rally in the final inning of the second game today to gain a 13 to 6 victory and a split with the Detroit Tigers in a double header played before 12,737 fans.

Coupled with Cleveland's double win over Washington, the nightcap loss dropped Detroit a half-game behind the Indians in the wild late September pennant scramble.

Nine Runs in Ninth

The Athletics' nine-run game-winning rally was started by pinch-hitter Chubby Dean with an infield single after one was out. Before the Tigers could retire two more men the Macks had rapped out nine more hits, including a homer by Bob Johnson with two teammates on base.

George Caster went the route for the Athletics in the opener and was tagged for 17 hits. Bridges and Seats, who came in at the start of the seventh to give Bridges a chance to rest for the Cleveland series opening here Friday, allowed only six blows.

The second game was a see-saw battle between Johnny Gorsica, of the Tigers, and Ed Heusser, of the A's, until the fifth when Greenberg's last homer sparked a two-run assault that gave Detroit a 6 to 4 lead. Gorsica pitched to only nine batsmen in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings.

Greenberg Has Streak

Gorsica was lifted after the A's had tied the score in the ninth. Seats coming in for his second relief chore of the day. He got Dee Miles on a foul fly but seven straight hits followed and Clay Smith then came in to strike out Floyd Wagner and finally end the nightmare.

Greenberg's homers today gave him the league leadership in this department with 38. He has batted 12 circuit blows in Detroit's last 15 games.

The Tigers play the A's in another twin bill tomorrow and then meet the Indians in a three-game week-end series.

Darkness Helps Yankees Divide With White Sox

Take Second Game 9-8 after Losing First of Dual Bill 6-3

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP)—Darkness descended upon Comiskey Park today just in time to help the New York Yankees to edge out the Chicago White Sox 9 to 8 in eight innings in the second game of a doubleheader after the Sox had elated a rabid crowd of 37,331 South Siders by copping the opener 6 to 3.

Chicago needed a double victory today to move over the champs into third place and for awhile it looked as though the Sox would do it. Both games were ding-dong battles all the way.

The Yanks were held to six hits in the first game by Lefty Thornton Lee, but mixed five of them with two errors for all their runs in the fourth and fifth frames. This made it necessary for the Sox to stage a four-run rally of their own in the sixth to win.

In the nightcap the Yankees opened up with four runs in the first inning and Chicago came right back with five in its half. The Sox got three more on five hits in the fourth.

But in the seventh George Selkirk homered with two on and in the eighth Joe DiMaggio, out of action with a leg injury, led off with a pinch double. Mike Chartak delivered a pinch single for one run and Charley Keller doubled for another.

Juniors To Practice

The Junior Association of Commerce softball team, slated to oppose B. and O. Bolt and Forge tossers Sunday in opening games of the Rocking Chair League title series, will practice on the Fort Hill High diamond this evening at 5 o'clock.

JENKINS DOWN BUT NOT OUT!

THE YANKEE SHAY

Did you ever hear of the One-Hoss Shay?
That ran and ran like a stout machine,
Then fell apart in a single day
And buckled up by the village green?
Every part of it fell apart
As the Deacon flopped with a startled start.

The One-Hoss Shay was a marvelous cart.
Not a cog went wrong — not a bolt was loose.
Year after year it was set to start,
A perfect Shay for an endless use.
"It will run forever," the neighbors said,
Till they looked at the debris just ahead.

The Yanks are the One-Hoss Shay this year.
Not one by one — but all in a bunch —
Wheel and axle and bolt and gear,
They lost their pitching—they lost their punch—
But after all, when you think it over,
Life's not an endless dream in clover.

Concerning the Yankees

There is one thing to be said about the Yankees. As a team, win or lose, they have been the most consistent machine of all time. They came up and ruled the game for four years—as a team.

When they crashed—they fell apart as a team.

No one can look back on the waning campaign of 1940 and pick out any Yankee goats. Not one goat or two goats or three goats.

They rose and fell together.

No one can throw the blame on Bill Dickey, Red Ruffing, Lefty Gomez, Joe Gordon, Red Rolfe, Frank Crosetti or Joe DiMaggio.

They all hit the soapy chute, head and head, arm in arm.

Part of this was physical. Part of it was psychological. Part of it was the iron shod turn of Lature—

"As this old world goes roun' roun' and roun',

There is no such thing as perpetual motion—upward or downward. Life is so constructed that one learns more from defeat than from victory.

This is an invalauble law of compensation. If it wasn't that way, what any upside-down existence this would be.

The Yankees, on one side, were assailed by a physical downward drifting—Dickey, Ruffing, Gomez and others—stars who had been big factors in their phenomenal supremacy.

They were attacked on another side by too much success. They were rated 3 to 5 shots against the field as the 1940 season opened. They were kick-ins. This was bound to have a bad effect on the entire team. I mean psychologically.

Explaining the Why

I have been asked over and over how an entire team could hit the gravel road in a bunch.

It wasn't just a matter of three or four important cogs through the first three months—but Dickey, —Ruffing—Gomez—Gordon — Rolfe —Crosetti—Sundra—to mention only a few.

In the first place, don't forget that the Yankee battery of Ruffing and Dickey was one of the greatest in baseball along with Mathewson and Bresnahan — Johnson and Streit—Brow nand Kling — Grove and Cochrane—Waddel and Schreck —Alexander and Killifer—on an on.

DiMaggio remains the leading factor through the team's last desperate charge before most of the cast fell apart.

Bill Dickey has been a major factor for many years. He is a twelve year veteran back of the plate. Dickey is the only catcher in history who ever drove in more than 100 runs four years.

Red Ruffing has been one of the most effective pitchers in the old clutch year after year. But Red finished with a bad arm after the last world series and he has never been the old Red since.

Don't overlook Gomez and Dickey —another great battery pair—one of the best of all time. Gomez also came to a heavy cropper in the same Red world series with a bad side and a bad arm.

Here's the start of a big slump.

In fact one of the smartest baseball experts, I happen to know, still believes that if the Reds had won that fourth game in Cincinnati —which they had bottled up—they might easily have won the series.

How? Because Ruffing and Gomez and Pearson all had bad arms and were useless the remainder of the route.

The Fire Spreads

Here was the triple battery—Ruffing and Dickey—Gomez and Dickey — Pearson and Dickey — that largely through wear and tear—the drift of the years—lost a good part of its effectiveness. From here the fire began to spread to batting eyes. The Yankees have shown their old time thunder with the war club, here and there.

But all you need do is to look at the batting averages, compared to a year ago—DiMaggio, Keller, Gordon, Dickey, Crosetti, Rolfe—from 75 to 90 points on the short side. Gordon, however, is now coming back with a rush.

The Real Gordon

Buddy Rosar and Henrich and Selkirk have held their own—or better. Rosar has turned in a fine assisting job.

But no team can have such men as Dickey, Ruffing, Gomez, Pearson, Gordon, Keller and Crosetti take such a dip and still keep winning.

Not against such teams as Detroit and Cleveland, who have both the pitching and the hitting, and who are now removed from the old Yankee shadow.

Dick Bartell has helped to make the Tiger infield. Hank Greenberg has again been a major factor at bat, plus high class work in the field.

School Boy Rowe has come back with a rush—and Buck Newsom has been one of the star pitchers of the year.

Charlie Gehringer may be slipping after long and brilliant service, but he is still a great ball player for any club.

Cleveland in Bob Feller has one of the great pitchers of all time—one who may finish as the greatest if the drum and bugle don't break up his career.

Cleveland has the best second base combination in the game today in Boudreau and Mack — and Cleveland has pitching aids in Milnar, Smith and Mel Harder to carry on the job.

I happen to know the few who believe the Yankees were on the big drift last April, figured the Red Sox as their logical successors. But Red Sox pitching has let the rest of the team down with an old fashioned thud.

You can't win minus consistent pitching. I'll give you all the sluggers. Give me Feller, Derringer, Walters and Newsom. Plus one good left hander.

Woolen and Rayon pin-spillers were on top of the heap after the second week's action in the Celanese Warehouse Mixed Bowling League with three of the four other combinations closely bunched behind them.

Paced by Reese Early with 436 and Howard Nave's 426 set the Rayon dux-crew snapped back after dropping the first tussle to take the remaining two games from the league-leading Woolen's Johnny Carlton's 406 set was the best the losers could muster.

Lining pin-poppers jumped right back into the thick of the leadership fight by sweeping all three games from the Satin dux-men. Harry Bowman's 421 set led the winners while Charley Hoenicka's 406 was the opposition's best.

Hard luck followed the cellar-dwelling Taffettas again this week. After jumping away to a good lead by easily downing the Crepe-crew in the opening game, they faltered and dropped the remaining two tussles. Driver's 373 set paced the Crepe-hangers while Louie Lippold was high for the lowly Tafettas with a 363 set.

Cleveland Takes Two To Regain Loop Lead

Allen and Feller Tie Up Senators In Double Victory

Veteran Wins First 3-1 as Chase Loses Own Game

Feller Hurls Nightcap and Holds on Despite Short Rest

By RAY BLOSSER

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18 (AP)—Old Johnny Allen and youthful Bob Feller threw a spell over the Washington Senators today. The Cleveland Indians thus swept a doubleheader and drove back into first place ahead of the Detroit Tigers.

Allen allowed the Senators six hits in the first game as he bested southpaw Kendall Chase for a 3 to 1 triumph, and Feller, jerked from the dugout with only two days rest, gave up only five bingles in the nightcap and beat Sid Hudson, 2 to 1, for his twenty-sixth victory of the year.

In the last part of the contest Feller looked as tired as a tavern juke box on Sunday morning, but weathered an eighth-inning threat by Washington to put his club a half game ahead of the Tigers, who broke even in their twin bill with the Athletics.

Had Pep Meeting

Chase, never happier than when he is slamming the whammie on Cleveland, had only himself to blame for dropping the opener. The Indians filled the bases with one out in the second inning on singles by Beau Bell and Frankie Pytlak and a walk to Ray Mack. At that point, Chase virtually donned an Indian uniform and before the frame was over he had walked in Cleveland's three runs on passes to Allen, Ben Chapman and Lou Boudreau.

Manager Oscar Vitt had intended to use Feller to open the crucial three-game series Friday, at Detroit, but changed his mind even though the 21-yearlold speedballer had gone nine tough innings Sunday ,when he hurled a two-hitter against Philadelphia.

Feller Tires

The young Iowan farm boy responded nobly, keeping the Nats subdued until the eighth inning. With Cleveland leading, 2 to 0, Jimmy Pofahl singled to center and Rick Ferrell walked. Hudson flied out but Case walked on four pitches. Feller was tiring, but still had enough left. Pofahl scored on Lewis' fly, then Walker grounded out to end the inning and the last Washington threat.

The Indians won the game on Roy Weatherly's sixth inning homer into the right field stand, followed in the seventh by another run which was partly a gift. One man was out as Mack sent a deep fly to Walker. The outfielder misjudged it, finally got his glove on the ball, but it fell safely for a two bagger. Mack took third on Hemsley's grounder and Feller drove in the run that won the game with a single to right.

Charles R. Mackert To Coach Frosh At Maryland U.

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 18. (AP)—Charles Roy Mackert, former Old line grid star, and now head of the University of Maryland's physical education department, will be head coach of the Terp Freshmen football squad this year.

He will be assisted by Mike Surgent, former Terp guard, and Coleman Headley, backfield star, both of whom played on the same teams for three years until 1937.

Mackert who ended his football playing career in 1920, performed both at fullback and tackle, and is the only Terp player to have been picked for both positions on all-time All-Maryland teams.

Pitt Finds Herself Stuck With a Murderous Schedule

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—A nice, clean example of the "killer schedule" in football is the one they have at the University of Pittsburgh this year. To all appearances, Pittsburgh is trying to knock herself out in the hope of finding herself in the arms of the Big Ten when she wakes up. It is a very painful way of crashing society.

There is no doubt that Pitt hankers to mix with the Big Ten, which is now the Big Nine, Chicago abstaining. There is little doubt that the Big Ten wants Pittsburgh, and will tap the Panthers for bones sooner or later.

They'd better do it sooner, though, or there will be no Panthers to tap. This is what Pittsburgh gets for attempting to be pure and big-time simultaneously.

The Big Ten calls for purity and high principle in new members. This is a fine example of the cold, bald nerve for which the Big Ten is famous. There is not, and never has been, any connection between Big Ten football and high principle. It is just something the boys read about in a book and would not recognize if they saw it.

Finds Herself Stuck

However, they ask it of Pittsburgh, and Pittsburgh will achieve it if it kills her, which it well may do.

Having scoured herself with soap and water to meet the specifications, Pitt still wants to be considered a football power, and she finds herself stuck with one of these new-fangled, murder-a-week schedules which no pure team can hope to negotiate.

In order, Pittsburgh meets:

Ohio State
Missouri
Southern Methodist
Fordham
Carnegie Tech
Nebraska
Penn State
Duke

The nearest thing to a soft touch on the list is Carnegie, which is also in the throes of reform. Owing to local circumstances and the influence of tradition, however, the Carnegie-Pitt game is always a standoff, and cannot be counted in the bag by even the loyalest Pittsburgh fanatic.

Outside of that, where do you see a chance for a pure team to catch its breath? Penn State is up and coming, and may well be one of the best in the east. Ohio State is the Big Ten champion, as powerful as ever. Nebraska and Missouri are the paladins of the Big Six, whose football yields to none in bone-crushing quality. Southern Methodist is co-favorite in the Southwestern conference, possibly the fastest league in college football. Fordham is coming back with another of her immovable-object specials, and Duke—well, you know Duke. Practically nobody beats Duke any more.

Schedule a Hangover

In part, the schedule is a hangover from the days when Pittsburgh concentrated on football and had sufficient uninhibited athletes on the payroll to knock over a tough enemy once a week and never feel it. This year's games were booked before anyone knew what 1940 would bring to Pittsburgh in the way of purity and social ambition and Big Ten police work.

The schedules for next year and the year after are somewhat more functional and reasonable—if the Panthers live to play them. A breather appears here and there, and Big Ten games begin to pop up all over.

About these Big Ten games, of course, there will be a certain irony—Pittsburgh, policed and purified by the Big Ten, playing Big Ten teams which police and purify themselves a little less than hardly at all and then in the gentlest possible manner.

There is consolation for the Panthers, though. Once they get to be members themselves, they too can pursue the ancient and honorable Big Ten policy of anything goes but not too loud.

It's just a question of keeping themselves alive till the great day comes. Ohio State—ouch! Missouri—ouch! Southern Methodist—ouch! October can be held on a pure team playing somebody else's schedule.

Germans, Rainsburg Will Clash Sunday

The Rainsburg (Pa.) Red Sox and the Paw Paw Boosters will play off their 4-4 tie game of several weeks ago on Saturday afternoon at Paw Paw, W. Va., it was announced yesterday by Thomas Gilchrist Jr., secretary of the Tri-County Baseball League.

The Red Sox need a victory to win the last half championship and thus earn a crack at the Cumberland Old Germans in a playoff series. If Rainsburg defeats Paw Paw, the last half race will be over but if the Boosters win, the Germans and Red Sox would finish in a tie.

According to Gilchrist, the Brewers and Rainsburg will open their title series Sunday at North End if the Red Sox win Saturday. If the Pennsylvanians lose, the playoff clash for the last half will be staged Sunday with the title series starting the following Sunday.

If Saturday's tussle should be rained out, then Rainsburg will automatically win the last half. According to the by-laws, no postponed or tie games may be played one week after the last closing date.

Pennant Races At a Glance

By The Associated Press

Now that the Cincinnati Reds have clinched their National League pennant they can sit back and laugh at the struggling American Leaguers who're in just as bad a mess as they've been for two weeks.

Cincinnati squeezed through to a victory at Philadelphia yesterday (Wednesday) and mathematically nailed down the National League championship as Brooklyn lost.

The Cleveland Indians took two games from the Washington Senators and regained the lead in the Junior circuit by half a game, while Detroit split with Philadelphia in a doubleheader.

The American league standings:

Cleveland	84	61	.579		9
Detroit	83	61	.576	½	10
New York	79	64	.552	4	11
Chicago	79	66	.545	5	9

Cards Crush Dodgers

BROOKLYN, Sept. 18 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals crushed the Dodgers 14 to 7 under a 17-hit bombardment today and mathematically eliminated Brooklyn from the National League pennant when Cincinnati conquered the Phillies.

Terrors Stress Kicking And Pass Defense Drill

WESTMINSTER, Md., Sept. 18 (AP)—Kicking for extra points, pass defense and blocking were stressed today as the Western Maryland College football squad went through intensive drills.

The backfield combination of Ervin Biasi, Manuel Kapian, Mack McPike and Kenneth Bills, with Mike Phillipes operating at center, showed up well on pass defense.

John Pirie, running guard, suffered a shoulder bruise yesterday in line scrimmage and will be out for a few days. Royce Gibson and Bernard Gugesky, Sophomore ends, who had suffered minor injuries, returned to practice today.

Browns Beat Bosox

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18. (AP)—The Browns established themselves more firmly in sixth place today by walloping the Boston Red Sox, 11 to 2, while Washington was losing twice to the Cleveland Indians.

The Browns now have an advantage of 1½ games over the Senators. With only 10 contests left, they can't overtake the Red Sox, who are in fifth place by 14 games.

Getting two triples and six doubles among their 14 hits, the Browns had an easy time downing Boston. Bob Harris limited the Sox to nine hits.

The Bees rapped out nine safeties off Joe Bowman, one of them, Chet Ross' 17th home run in the fourth with Max West on base.

Cleveland Takes Two To Regain Loop Lead

Allen and Feller Tie Up Senators In Double Victory

Veteran Wins First 3-1 as Chase Loses Own Game

By RAY BLOSSER

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18 (AP)—Old Johnny Allen and youthful Bob Feller threw a spell over the Washington Senators today. The Cleveland Indians thus swept a double-header and drove back into first place ahead of the Detroit Tigers.

Allen allowed the Senators six hits in the first game as he bested southpaw Kendall Chase for a 3 to 1 triumph, and Feller, jerked from the dugout with only two days rest, gave up only five bingles in the nightcap and beat Sid Hudson, 2 to 1, for his twenty-sixth victory of the year.

In the last part of the contest Feller looked as tired as a tavern juke box on Sunday morning, but weathered an eighth-inning threat by Washington to put his club a half game ahead of the Tigers, who broke even in their twin bill with the Athletics.

Had Pep Meeting

Chase, never happier than when he is slamming the whammie on Cleveland, had only himself to blame for dropping the opener. The Indians filled the bases with one out in the second inning on singles by Beau Bell and Frankie Pytlak and a walk to Ray Mack. At that point, Chase virtually donned an Indian uniform and before the frame was over he had walked in Cleveland's three runs on passes to Allen, Ben Chapman and Lou Boudreau.

Manager Oscar Vitt had intended to use Feller to open the crucial three-game series Friday, at Detroit, but changed his mind even though the 21-yearlold speedballer had gone nine tough innings Sunday when he hurled a two-hitter against Philadelphia.

Feller Tires

The young Iowan farm boy responded nobly, keeping the Nats subdued until the eighth inning. With Cleveland leading, 2 to 0, Jimmy Pofahl singled to center and Rick Ferrell walked. Hudson flied out but Case walked on four pitches. Feller was tiring, but still had enough left. Pofahl scored on Lewis' fly, then Walker grounded out to end the inning and the last Washington threat.

The Indians won the game on Roy Weatherly's sixth inning homer into the right field stand, followed in the seventh by another run which was partly a gift. One man was out as Mack sent a deep fly to Walker. The outfielder misjudged it, finally got his glove on the ball, but it fell safely for a two bagger. Mack took third on Hemsley's grounder and Feller drove in the run that won the game with a single to right.

Charles R. Mackert To Coach Frosh At Maryland U.

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 18. (AP)—Charles Roy Mackert, former Old line grid star, and now head of the University of Maryland's physical education department, will be head coach of the Terp Freshmen football squad this year.

He will be assisted by Mike Surgent, former Terp guard, and Coleman Headley, backfield star, both of whom played on the same teams for three years until 1937.

The selections were announced today by Geary Eppley, athletic director.

Mackert who ended his football playing career in 1920, performed both at fullback and tackle, and is the only Terp player to have been picked for both positions on all-time All-Maryland teams.

The freshman squad will report Saturday.

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—A nice, clean example of the "killer schedule" in football is the one they have at the University of Pittsburgh this year. To all appearances, Pittsburgh is trying to knock herself out in the hope of finding herself in the arms of the Big Ten when she wakes up. It is a very painful way of crashing society.

There is no doubt that Pitt hankers to mix with the Big Ten, which is now the Big Nine, Chicago abstaining. There is little doubt that the Big Ten wants Pittsburgh, and will tap the Panthers for bones sooner or later.

They'd better do it sooner, though, or there will be no Panthers to tap. This is what Pittsburgh gets for attempting to be pure and big-time simultaneously.

The Big Ten calls for purity and high principle in new members. This is a fine example of the cold, bald nerve for which the Big Ten is famous. There is not, and never has been, any connection between Big Ten football and high principle. It is just something the boys read about in a book and would not recognize if they saw it.

Finds Herself Stuck

However, they ask it of Pittsburgh, and Pittsburgh will achieve it if it kills her, which it well may do.

Having scoured herself with soap and water to meet the specifications, Pitt still wants to be considered a football power, and she finds herself stuck with one of these new-fangled, murder-a-week schedules which no pure team can hope to negotiate.

In order, Pittsburgh meets:

Ohio State
Missouri
Southern Methodist
Fordham
Carnegie Tech
Nebraska
Penn State
Duke

The nearest thing to a soft touch on the list is Carnegie, which is also in the throes of reform. Owing to local circumstances and the influence of tradition, however, the Carnegie-Pitt game is always a standoff, and cannot be counted in the bag by even the loyalest Pittsburgh fanatic.

Outside of that, where do you see a chance for a pure team to catch its breath? Penn State is up and coming, and may well be one of the best in the east. Ohio State is the Big Ten champion, as powerful as ever. Nebraska and Missouri are the paladins of the Big Six, whose football yields to none in bone-crushing quality. Southern Methodist is co-favorite in the Southwestern conference, possibly the fastest league in college football. Fordham is coming back with another of her immovable-object specials, and Duke—well, you know Duke. Practically nobody beats Duke any more.

Schedule a Hangover

In part, the schedule is a hangover from the days when Pittsburgh concentrated on football and had sufficient uninhibited athletes on the payroll to knock over a tough enemy once a week and never feel it. This year's games were booked before anyone knew what 1940 would bring to Pittsburgh in the way of purity and social ambition and Big Ten police work.

The schedules for next year and the year after are somewhat more functional and reasonable—if the Panthers live to play them. A breather appears here and there, and Big Ten games begin to pop up all over.

About these Big Ten games, of course, there will be a certain irony—Pittsburgh, policed and purified by the Big Ten, playing Big Ten teams which police and purify themselves a little less than hardly at all and then in the gentlest possible manner.

There is consolation for the Panthers, though. Once they get to be members themselves, they too can pursue the ancient and honorable Big Ten policy of anything goes but not too loud.

It's just a question of keeping themselves alive till the great day comes. Ohio State—ouch! Missouri—ouch! Southern Methodist—ouch! October can be held on a pure team playing somebody else's schedule.

Germans, Rainsburg Will Clash Sunday

The Rainsburg (Pa.) Red Sox and the Paw Paw Boosters will play off their 4-4 tie game of several weeks ago on Saturday afternoon at Paw Paw, W. Va., it was announced yesterday by Thomas Gilchrist Jr., secretary of the Tri-County Baseball League.

The Red Sox need a victory to win the last half championship and thus earn a crack at the Cumberland Old Germans in a playoff series. If Rainsburg defeats Paw Paw, the last half race will be over but if the Boosters win, the Germans and Red Sox would finish in a tie.

According to Gilchrist, the Brewers and Rainsburg will open their title series Sunday at North End if the Red Sox win Saturday. If the Pennsylvanians lose, the playoff clash for the last half will be staged Sunday with the title series starting the following Sunday.

If Saturday's tussle should be rained out, then Rainsburg will automatically win the last half. According to the by-laws, no postponed or tie games may be played one week after the last closing date.

Pennant Races At a Glance

By The Associated Press

Now that the Cincinnati Reds have clinched their National League pennant they can sit back and laugh at the struggling American Leaguers who're in just as bad a mess as they've been for two weeks.

Cincinnati squeezed through to a victory at Philadelphia yesterday (Wednesday) and mathematically nailed down the National League championship as Brooklyn lost.

The Cleveland Indians took two games from the Washington Senators and regained the lead in the Junior circuit by half a game, while Detroit split with Philadelphia in a doubleheader.

The American league standings:

Cards Crush Dodgers

BROOKLYN, Sept. 18 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals crushed the Dodgers 14 to 7 under a 17-hit bombardment today and mathematically eliminated Brooklyn from the National League pennant when Cincinnati conquered the Phillies.

Johnny Mize contributed four singles and batted in six runs as the Red Birds mauled the Dodgers pitchers.

Terrors Stress Kicking And Pass Defense Drill

WESTMINSTER, Md., Sept. 18 (AP)—Kicking for extra points, pass defense and blocking were stressed today as the Western Maryland College football squad went through intensive drills.

The backfield combination of Ervin Biasi, Manuel Kapian, Mack McPike and Kenneth Bills, with Mike Phillipes operating at center, showed up well on pass defense.

John Pirie, running guard, suffered a shoulder bruise yesterday in line scrimmage and will be out for a few days. Royce Gibson and Bernard Gugesky, Sophomore ends, who had suffered minor injuries, returned to practice today.

Browns Beat Bosox

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18. (AP)—The Browns established themselves more firmly in sixth place today by walloping the Boston Red Sox, 11 to 2, while Washington was losing twice to the Cleveland Indians.

The Browns now have an advantage of 1½ games over the Senators. With only 10 contests left, they can't overtake the Red Sox, who are in fifth place by 14 games.

Getting two triples and six doubles among their 14 hits, the Browns had an easy time downing Boston. Bob Harris limited the Sox to nine hits.

DICK TRACY—Detour

Celanese Officers Ready To Arbitrate All Differences

Present Situation Outlined in Full-page Advertisement in Paper

Publication of a full-page newspaper advertisement was the only comment made by Celanese officials relative to the situation at the plant yesterday.

Yesterday's statement, the corporation announced, was made in order "that its employees and the community may know the facts of the present situation with reference to operation of the plant.

The statement continues that the management was informed Tuesday by Shelton Carner, a union committeeman in the Celiulose Acetate department, that unless certain disciplinary action was revoked the plant would be shut down.

Offers To Arbitrate

"To Mr. Carner and to the union officials authorized to deal with these matters the company offered to arbitrate all pending matters of discipline," the statement continues.

"Acting under the leadership of Mr. Carner, employees in the Cellulose Acetate department engaged in a sit-down yesterday afternoon and their further activities resulted in the employees on the 11 p. m. shift leaving the plant last night (Tuesday) shortly after they came to work," the statement declared.

"The company was not yesterday, and has not yet, been informed that the responsible officers of the union approve Mr. Carner's action. The management has been informed that the sit-down in the Cellulose Acetate department was not authorized by the union.

"The company is willing to continue operations to the extent that it is possible to do so by the attendance of employees to their tasks.

Willing To Operate

"The company is willing to continue to operate under the terms of an agreement for temporary operation made at the suggestion of the Secretary of Labor on September 5.

"The company is willing to sign the agreement formulated at the Department of Labor, to which the company and the union representatives gave their approval."

The corporation statement then declares that "the company cannot agree that the plant can operate without discipline or that employees who leave their work and engage in violence are not subject to discipline.

"The company knows no better way of determining whether discipline is warranted than by submission of the facts in dispute to the judgement of an impartial arbitrator," the statement concluded.

Company Police Provoked Incident Sept. 9---Dundon

Management Responsible for Work Suspension, Union Head Says

The trouble at the Celanese plant Sept. 9 in which two unionists were injured was provoked by the corporation's armed guards, James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, TWUA, asserted in a prepared statement last night.

"Management and management alone is responsible" for the shutdown at the plant Tuesday night, Dundon declared. "The suspension of work was a spontaneous movement of workers in whom the arbitrary and unjustified attitude of management had taxed the last bit of human patience."

Charging that the hired guards of the company charged into a group of workers with clubs and teargas the night of Sept. 9, Dundon declared the company now has announced its intention of disciplining the innocent victims of the attack rather than the guards who, he said, exceeded their authority.

Intentions Peaceable

Referring to the Sept. 9 incident, Dundon said, "during the absence of union officials in Washington a group of workers from various deparements marched in a body towards the Warp Knitting department. Their intentions were perfectly peaceful and understandable in view of the attitude of management at that time and during the nine weeks of trying negotiations.

"Management must certainly be aware of the fact that neither that incident nor any other which has occurred since would have taken place if the company had taken a reasonable attitude in the first place.

"But, to go on with the story — before those workers reached the Warp Knitting department, they were suddenly confronted by a cordon of the company's special police. These honest workers had no intention of creating a conflict, and they were preparing to withdraw when the hired guards of the Company charged into them with tear gas and blackjacks.

Fired Wrong Ones

"The company," Dundon continued, "has insisted in firing, not the guilty ones, but the two victims—the woman who was burned by teargas and the man who was clubbed into insensibility. This is certainly the strange case of the criminal who is left free and the victim who is put in jail."

Declaring the management had assured the union at the Washington conferences that there would be no discharges, Dundon said that since the committee's return from the capital the management had been "indefinite and evasive" concerning the number of workers to be disciplined.

Dundon said it was regretable that the company chose to throw "the plant, the workers and the community into turmoil and labor strife" at a time when a ratified contract awaited only the signatures of the representatives of the management and the union.

Gateway Chatter

Closing of the Celanese plant here Tuesday night has replaced the draft and the European war as a main topic of discussion in Cumberland.

Naturally with between 9,000 and 10,000 workers involved as well as practically every citizen of Cumberland and many in surrounding communties being affected directly or indirectly by the strike, walkout; shutdown or whatever it is, closing of the big plant is uppermost in everybody's mind.

The NEWS office was literally swamped with hundreds and hundreds of calls Tuesday night after word circulated that there was trouble at the plant.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company was swamped with calls throughout the evening and until early hours of Wednesday morning.

Despite the extra load of additional calls the operators worked untiringly and answered quickly and courteously and rendered a fine service to many citizens of Cumberland and nearby communities.

Many persons when informed that the workers on the "Cat-eye" shift had walked out expressed surprise and it was evident that most callers were disappointed at the turn of events at the plant just after a new contract had been agreed upon.

One NEWS reporter became so accustomed to answering questions about the Celanese situation that he hardly knew what to say about two o'clock Wednesday morning when a caller wanted to know who won the seventh race at Havre De Grace.

An Allegany county woman, Mrs. T. E. Bush, who has lived for the past ten years in Roswell, New Mexico, has received notable mention for writing poems and short stories. Her latest poem was published in the October number of "Ranch Romances."

Mrs. Bush is the former Miss Virginia Stonestreet, of Flintstone Route 2.

No doubt many NEWS readers were as surprised as members of the staff yesterday to read in Section 8 of the questionnaire to be asked men who register October 16 under the new Conscription act that "x x x the nation is at war and every registrant is thus put on notice to know his position and duty."

The NEWS has just been advised by Central Press Association, which furnished the feature, that the draft registration blank was for the 1917 draft.

Officials in Washington have also advised that reference to war will be deleted from the new questionnaire to be handed out Oct. 16.

Allegany county teachers will be interested in a story elsewhere on this page to the effect that the Board of Education will grant leaves of absence to all teachers who are called into military service in the United States.

Union To Stay Out Until Agreement Is Signed

General Committee Empowered To Patrol Gates at Plant

The membership of Celanese Local 1874, TWUA, last night unanimously voted not to return to work until a satisfactory agreement is signed.

The union also voted to empower the general committee to patrol the plant gates "for the time being."

It was announced that conciliators for the United States Department of Labor had arrived in Cumberland. The conciliators have advised the union's negotiating committee to hold itself in readiness for a meeting this morning at 11 a. m., officials said.

Members who packed textile union hall and overflowed into and blocked off North Mechanic street heard Herbert Payne, national vice president of the union, attack the management as "cheap and petty" in its advertised attack upon an individual member of the union.

Payne Makes Statement

Payne, in his statement, said:

"In a full-page advertisement yesterday afternoon, the management singled out an individual worker in a cheap and petty attempt to pin upon him the responsibility for the labor disturbance at the plant.

"It is unthinkable that a great corporation would stoop to such subterfuge in an attempt to evade the responsibility for an occurrence caused by its own stupid and short-sighted action.

"The company also piously states it is willing to arbitrate. Its advertised desire to arbitrate comes so late it is ridiculous. Seven separate times we offered to arbitrate all the issues involved in our negotiations for a contract, and seven separate times the management refused to agree to arbitration. Why does the management not explain that to the public?

"The fact that the company would pick out a single individual and hold him up to the public gaze as responsible for an occurrence for which he could not possibly be held accountable, and which as an individual, he could not possibly perform, is further evidence of the company's bad faith.

Willing to Negotiate

"The union has been willing to negotiate with the company on the grievances in question at all times. Even when the union's committee was insulted and rebuffed by the failure of the plant superintendent to confer with us as he had promised to do, we offered a counter-proposal which was a fair and honorable compromise. That should be ample proof of our willingness to negotiate an adjustment of the issues and to compromise on them."

Union officials announced at last night's meeting that a meeting of the general membership will be held Friday or Saturday at a time and place designated by executive board. The general committee will meet at union headquarters today at 7:30 p. m.

Twenty-one Receive Interviews with State Insurance Actuary

Twenty-one persons seeking information on insurance policies were interviewed yesterday at city hall by Calvert Stein, actuary of the State Insurance Department. It marked Stein's fourth visit to Cumberland in two months.

Insurance agencies throughout the state have requested John B. Gontrum, state insurance commissioner, to extend the work to other counties but Stein said that this would be impossible in 1940 due to the small budget set aside by the state for operation of the department.

Stein, however, is hopeful that the work can be extended next year provided the state legislature approves an increase in the budget.

The State Insurance Department receives from 8,000 to 10,000 inquiries annually at the home office from policy-holders and turns over a million and a half dollars to the state each year in licenses fees and premium taxes. Stein said that 25,000 licenses are issued yearly by the department.

Those seeking information about their insurance policies will have an opportunity of talking over matters with Stein when he makes his next appearance at city hall, Wednesday, October 2.

Celanese Officers Ready To Arbitrate All Differences

Present Situation Outlined in Full-page Advertisement in Paper

Publication of a full-page newspaper advertisement was the only comment made by Celanese officials relative to the situation at the plant yesterday.

Yesterday's statement, the corporation announced, was made in order "that its employees and the community may know the facts of the present situation with reference to operation of the plant.

The corporation declared, "the company is, of course, ready and willing to continue to operate the plant."

The statement continues that the management was informed Tuesday by Shelton Carner, a union committeeman in the Cellulose Acetate department, that unless certain disciplinary action was revoked the plant would be shut down.

Offers To Arbitrate

"To Mr. Carner and to the union officials authorized to deal with these matters the company offered to arbitrate all pending matters of discipline," the statement continues.

"Acting under the leadership of Mr. Carner, employees in the Cellulose Acetate department engaged in a sit-down yesterday afternoon and their further activities resulted in the employees on the 11 p. m. shift leaving the plant last night (Tuesday) shortly after they came to work," the statement declared.

"The company was not yesterday, and has not yet, been informed that the responsible officers of the union approve Mr. Carner's action. The management has been informed that the sit-down in the Cellulose Acetate department was not authorized by the union.

"The company is willing to continue operations to the extent that it is possible to do so by the attendance of employees to their tasks.

Willing To Operate

"The company is willing to continue to operate under the terms of an agreement for temporary operation made at the suggestion of the Secretary of Labor on September 5.

"The company is willing to sign the agreement formulated at the Department of Labor, to which the company and the union representatives gave their approval."

The corporation statement then declares that "the company cannot agree that the plant can operate without discipline or that employees who leave their work and engage in violence are not subject to discipline.

"The company knows no better way of determining whether discipline is warranted than by submission of the facts in dispute to the judgement of an impartial arbitrator," the statement concluded.

CO-OPERATIVE CONCERT WORKERS—Workers are now engaged in the membership drive of the Cumberland Co-operative Concert Association as shown in the photograph taken yesterday at the Association's campaign headquarters, 109 Baltimore street. Company Police Provoked Incident Sept. 9---Dundon

Management Responsible for Work Suspension, Union Head Says

The trouble at the Celanese plant Sept. 9 in which two unionists were injured was provoked by the corporation's armed guards, James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, TWUA, asserted in a prepared statement last night.

"Management and management alone is responsible" for the shutdown at the plant Tuesday night, Dundon declared. "The suspension of work was a spontaneous movement of workers in whom the arbitrary and unjustified attitude of management had taxed the last bit of human patience."

Charging that the hired guards of the company charged into a group of workers with clubs and teargas the night of Sept. 9, Dundon declared the company now has announced its intention of disciplining the innocent victims of the attack rather than the guards who, he said, exceeded their authority.

Intentions Peaceable

Referring to the Sept. 9 incident, Dundon said, "during the absence of union officials in Washington a group of workers from various deparements marched in a body towards the Warp Knitting department. Their intentions were perfectly peaceful and understandable in view of the attitude of management at that time and during the nine weeks of trying negotiations.

"Management must certainly be aware of the fact that neither that incident nor any other which has occurred since would have taken place if the company had taken a reasonable attitude in the first place.

"But, to go on with the story — before those workers reached the Warp Knitting department, they were suddenly confronted by a cordon of the company's special police. These honest workers had no intention of creating a conflict, and they were preparing to withdraw when the hired guards of the Company charged into them with tear gas and blackjacks.

Fired Wrong Ones

"The company," Dundon continued, "has insisted in firing, not the guilty ones, but the two victims—the woman who was burned by teargas and the man who was clubbed into insensibility. This is certainly the strange case of the criminal who is left free and the victim who is put in jail."

Declaring the management had assured the union at the Washington conferences that there would be no discharges, Dundon said that since the committee's return from the capital the management had been "indefinite and evasive" concerning the number of workers to be disciplined.

Dundon said it was regretable that the company chose to throw "the plant, the workers and the community into turmoil and labor strife" at a time when a ratified contract awaited only the signatures of the representatives of the management and the union.

Gateway Chatter

Closing of the Celanese plant here Tuesday night has replaced the draft and the European war as a main topic of discussion in Cumberland.

Naturally with between 9,000 and 10,000 workers involved as well as practically every citizen of Cumberland and many in surrounding communities being affected directly or indirectly by the strike, walkout; shutdown or whatever it is, closing of the big plant is uppermost in everybody's mind.

The NEWS office was literally swamped with hundreds and hundreds of calls Tuesday night after word circulated that there was trouble at the plant.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company was swamped with calls throughout the evening and until early hours of Wednesday morning.

Despite the extra load of additional calls the operators worked untiringly and answered quickly and courteously and rendered a fine service to many citizens of Cumberland and nearby communities.

Many persons when informed that the workers on the "Cat-eye" shift had walked out expressed surprise and it was evident that most callers were disappointed at the turn of events at the plant just after a new contract had been agreed upon.

One NEWS reporter became so accustomed to answering questions about the Celanese situation that he hardly knew what to say about two o'clock Wednesday morning when a caller wanted to know who won the seventh race at Havre De Grace.

No doubt many NEWS readers were as surprised as members of the staff yesterday to read in Section 8 of the questionnaire to be asked men who register October 16 under the new Conscription act that "x x x the nation is at war and every registrant is thus put on notice to know his position and duty."

The NEWS has just been advised by Central Press Association, which furnished the feature, that the draft registration blank was for the 1917 draft.

Officials in Washington have also advised that reference to war will be deleted from the new questionnaire to be handed out Oct. 16.

Union To Stay Out Until Agreement Is Signed

General Committee Empowered To Patrol Gates at Plant

The membership of Celanese Local 1874, TWUA, last night unanimously voted not to return to work until a satisfactory agreement is signed.

The union also voted to empower the general committee to patrol the plant gates "for the time being."

It was announced that conciliators for the United States Department of Labor had arrived in Cumberland. The conciliators have advised the union's negotiating committee to hold itself in readiness for a meeting this morning at 11 a. m., officials said.

Members who packed textile union hall and overflowed into and blocked off North Mechanic street heard Herbert Payne, national vice president of the union, attack the management as "cheap and petty" in its advertised attack upon an individual member of the union.

Payne Makes Statement

Payne, in his statement, said:

"In a full-page advertisement yesterday afternoon, the management singled out an individual worker in a cheap and petty attempt to pin upon him the responsibility for the labor disturbance at the plant.

"It is unthinkable that a great corporation would stoop to such ubterfuge in an attempt to evade the responsibility for an occurrence caused by its own stupid and short-sighted action.

"The company also piously states it is willing to arbitrate. Its advertised desire to arbitrate comes so late it is ridiculous. Seven separate times we offered to arbitrate all the issues involved in our negotiations for a contract, and seven separate times the management refused to agree to arbitration. Why does the management not explain that to the public?

"The fact that the company would pick out a single individual and hold him up to the public gaze as responsible for an occurrence for which he could not possibly be held accountable, and which as an individual, he could not possibly perform, is further evidence of the company's bad faith.

Willing to Negotiate

"The union has been willing to negotiate with the company on the grievances in question at all times. Even when the union's committee was insulted and rebuffed by the failure of the plant superintendent to confer with us as he had promised to do, we offered a counter-proposal which was a fair and honorable compromise. That should be ample proof of our willingness to negotiate an adjustment of the issues and to compromise on them."

Union officials announced at last night's meeting that a meeting of the general membership will be held Friday or Saturday at a time and place designated by executive board. The general committee will meet at union headquarters today at 7:30 p. m.

Twenty-one Receive Interviews with State Insurance Actuary

Twenty-one persons seeking information on insurance policies were interviewed yesterday at city hall by Calvert Stein, actuary of the State Insurance Department. It marked Stein's fourth visit to Cumberland in two months.

Insurance agencies throughout the state have requested John B. Gontrum, state insurance commissioner, to extend the work to other counties but Stein said that this would be impossible in 1940 due to the small budget set aside by the state for operation of the department.

Stein, however, is hopeful that the work can be extended next year provided the state legislature approves an increase in the budget.

The State Insurance Department receives from 8,000 to 10,000 inquiries annually at the home office from policy-holders and turns over a million and a half dollars to the state each year in licenses fees and premium taxes. Stein said that 25,000 licenses are issued yearly by the department.

Those seeking information about their insurance policies will have an opportunity of talking over matters with Stein when he makes his next appearance at city hall, Wednesday, October 2.
